Action at Last in the Senate on the Virginia Question.

The Closing Debate Between Trumbull and Sumner.

A Bill for Admission Passed by a Vote of 48 to 10.

Unconditional Admission of the State Denied.

A DAY OF SPEECH-MAKING IN THE HOUSE.

Interesting Attempt of General Butler and Reply to Mr. Dawes—The Gold Investigation—Speeches on the Franking Privilege—A Universal Suffrage Amendment Proposed—Miscellaneous.

(Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.—To-day has been the most interesting day of all the debate in the Senate on Virginia. The course of the extremists has been so disgraceful for the last few days that it began to be wondered whether the strong men of the Senate, like TRUMBULL, CONKLING, WILLIAMS and others, would sit still and permit the tirade of abuse and misrepresentation to run on without some effort to check it. The opportunity came to-day. Mr. TRUMBULL got the floor between 2 and 3 o'clock and proceeded to pay his respects to the slanders of SUMNER, DRAKE & Co. From the first it was evident that he meant to do his whole duty. The word went out, and the galleries, which were full before, became crowded as they have not been during this session. The House, which was wasting the day in Committee of the Whole, became depopulated, and the members crowded the floor of the Senate. The spectators filled up the aisles in the gallery, and even the diplomatic box was filled to its utmost capacity, while crowds thronged around the doorways as they did in impeachment days. As Mr. TRUMBULL warmed up, and became truly eloquent, as he can, when occasion requires, the interest became intense; when he began his trenchant vindication of the name of Virginia, every ear held earnest attention. When he levelled his utterances with stinging sarcasm at Mr. SUMNER there was perceptible commotion every where, in the eagerness to see how the Massachusetts Senator bore the terrible castigation. For once he was unnerved; he moved uneasily in his chair, he spoke nervously to acquaintances and brother Senators; color mounted to his face, which, when he is under control, is usually pale and placid. He was silenced as he seldom is, for he has been schooled to the effect of attack and assault in debate. But Mr. TRUMBULL spared him not. With merciless severity he showed how dominable his course had been towards all the measures and all the people who had favored the admission of Virginia, to all the disreputable and anonymous attacks upon Mr. WALKER, and the charges of fraud in the Virginia election. Mr. TRUMBULL turned the attention of the Senate to the report of General CAMPBELL, to the letter of Governor WELLS, and to the evidence of well-known public men in regard to Governor WALKER's character. Senator TRUMBULL spoke until 4:30 o'clock, when Mr. SUMNER, who had taken notes throughout, began his reply, which was delivered in his accustomed oratorical manner, and which was a repetition of his previous efforts. He reiterated all his charges, and closed very impressively. With much fervor he implored the Senate not to consent to the perpetuation of such an inquity as the admission of Virginia. At 4:50 the Senate, in accordance with the agreement of yesterday, began voting on the bill and pending amendments. The first was Mr. DRAKE's proposition that the State be admitted upon the fundamental condition that the Constitution shall never be changed so as to deprive any citizen of the right to vote upon the ground of race or color. This was agreed to by yeas 31, nays 26. A further amendment that no person should ever be deprived of the right to hold office by reason of his race or color, was agreed to by one majority. Mr. WILSON then offered an amendment, securing the school rights and privileges of the Constitution in the same way, which was agreed to—yeas 32, nays 26. Mr. MORTON then moved a substitute for the preamble, which, while materially different in language, was not materially different in effect, simply declaring that, whereas Virginia had done certain things which were conditions precedent to admission; therefore resolved, &c. This was agreed to—yeas, 36; nays, 25. On the final passage, the Democrats took occasion to give reasons briefly why they could not vote for the bill. THURMAN, STOCKTON, BAYARD, SAULSBURY, HAMILTON, CASSERLY, VICKERS and NORTON severally declared their sorrow at being obliged to vote against the bill, believing the conditions unconstitutional. The bill then passed—yeas, 48; nays 10. Mr. SUMNER not voting. As the provisos attached by the Senate do not impose any new or further conditions, and are only contingent in their effect, the bill will undoubtedly be concurred in by the House, though it is reported to-night that BUTLER means to try and get Senators committed to his Reconstruction Committee. He will not be able to do it.

THE GOLD INVESTIGATION.

The Banking and Currency Committee had before them to-day the president of a bank of New-York, who was recalled; Mr. BRODERICK, of the Treasury Department, who was one of the Committee of Three sent to New-York to examine the Tenth National Bank; Hon. BENJAMIN BUTLER, Hon. Wm. M. Evarts and Hon. Geo. S. Boutwell. The latter gentleman last named was questioned informally as to the effect of the gold panic, and its violent fluctuations upon the business of the country. The evidence elicited to-day was not material to the investigation.

BUTLER'S REPORT TO RAISE A REVENUE.

The House literally waited the whole day through in effort on the part of BUTLER to make a speech in reply to Mr. DAWES. He on the floor once on a motion to reconsider a private bill, and was ruled out of order, on the ground that his remarks were not germane to the pending motion. Then he got the House into Committee of the Whole, but to his chagrin found that somebody else was entitled to the floor, which somebody else, in the person of Mr. WILSON, of Ohio, declined to yield, and went on to read a speech, which was followed by other written speeches, so that the House became depopulated as an early hour, most of the members going to the Senate, and no business was done over was transacted during the day.

THE INCOME TAX.

In the short discussion on the joint resolution declaring the construction of the Income Tax law, Mr. WILSON, Chairman of the Military Committee, expressed a desire to recommit the resolution to the Finance Committee, from which it was reported, suggesting at the same time that an amendment be made to it exempting military officers from payment of the income tax. The proposition did not appear to meet with much favor in the Senate, and that was not the slightest possibility of the passage of any such piece of legislation.

THE TARIFF.

Mr. SCHENCK to-day announced that he hoped the Ways and Means Committee would be able to report the Tariff bill by Monday or Tuesday of next week, and therefore asked leave to sit during the session of the House, which was granted. A great deal of work, however, will have to be done within the next few days if the bill is reported at the time named.

A COLORED SENATOR.

Considerable commotion has been occasioned by the announcement of the fact (for it is a fact) that a negro has been elected United States Senator from Mississippi for the short term ending March 4, 1871. His name is P. B. S. PINCHBACK, and he is at present a State Senator from Natchez, Miss. He was born in Ohio, raised in Indiana, where he became a Methodist preacher, and some years ago emigrated to Mississippi. He is said to be a man of very considerable ability. It will be an era in that very aristocratic body, the Senate, when this black man actually sits down by the side of Mr. SUMNER and Mr. GARRETT DAVIS; verilably a man and a brother, and a Senator as well.

CALIFORNIA LANDS AND THE RAILROADS.

A memorial of the California Legislature was presented in the Senate to-day, setting forth that immense tracts of land, amounting to about 12,000,000 of acres, in that State, are now owned and claimed by a few Railroad Companies, under grants from Congress; that a great portion of the agricultural lands of California are embraced in these tracts, and that experience has shown that their ownership by a few persons is very disastrous to the interests of citizens. The petition further states that of the 15,000,000 of acres, about one-half is owned by the Southern Pacific Railroad Companies, under the act of 1866, and that the land claimed by them extends about 600 miles in length, in alternate sections, and with a width of sixty miles. It appears that the Secretary of the Interior has decided that the claim of these Companies is valid; and the memorial prays that this territory may be restored to pre-emption and settlement as soon as practicable.

MONEYS FROM JAPAN.

Some time ago a resolution passed the House calling on the Secretary of the Treasury for information relative to the sum of $600,000 paid the United States by Japan, as indemnity for aggression upon our commerce. The Secretary replied that the books of the Department did not show that any such sum had been paid into the Treasury, and that he had no information on the subject. It appears that the Secretary of State was the proper officer to apply to for this information, and a resolution to that effect was introduced a few days ago. The point sought to be obtained by the resolution is, whether the money has been paid, and if so, whether any portion of it has been spent by the State Department or any other branch of the Government.

COVODE VS. FOSTER.

The House Committee on Elections considered the contested election case of COVODE vs. FOSTER, to-day, and by strict party vote, voted to report in favor of giving Mr. COVODE the seat.

Dispatch to the Associated Press.

WOMAN'S SUFFRAGE.

The delegates to the Woman's Rights Convention, recently in session here, will appear before the Senate and House Committees on the District of Columbia to-morrow morning, for the purpose of demanding that universal suffrage be extended, and that the female employes of the Executive Departments of the Government be placed upon the same footing as the males, and receive the same compensation, &c.

APPOINTMENTS BY THE PRESIDENT.

The President to-day sent to the Senate the following nominations: WM. CURTIS, of Illinois, Minister Resident at Portugal, vice BURLINGAME, resigned; E. S. MARSH, of New-Jersey, Assistant Secretary of Legation at London, vice BADEAU, resigned; LUTHER LEE, Jr., Collector of Customs for the district of Norfolk and Portsmouth, Va.

TAX ON OFFICIAL SALARIES.

Secretary BOUTWELL has issued a circular of instructions for the guidance of all disbursing officers, agents or clerks of the United States relative to the continuance of the Internal Revenue tax on salaries, in which he says that the question has been submitted to the Department whether the tax on payments for salaries and services by the United States levied and withheld, by virtue of the 122d section of the Internal Revenue act, approved June 30, 1868, as amended, is governed by the 116th section of the said act as amended, which infer relates to taxes on incomes, and not to taxes on such salaries. The decision of the proper accounting officers and the Commissioner of Internal Revenue has been given on the subject; and in accordance therewith such taxes will be withheld, as usual, by disbursing officers, agents or clerks of the United States.

FORTY-FIRST CONGRESS.

SECOND SESSION.

SENATE....WASHINGTON, Friday, Jan. 21.

Mr. WILSON presented a memorial of 1,400 army officers for an increase of pay. Referred to the Military Committee. Also a memorial in favor of a Sixteenth Amendment to the Constitution, giving women the right to vote. Referred to the Judiciary Committee.

Mr. POMEROY presented a petition of like import to permit the exercise of the elective franchise by citizens now deprived of that right. Referred to the Judiciary Committee.

THE FRANKING PRIVILEGE.

Mr. MORRILL, of Vermont, in presenting a petition for the abolition of the franking privilege, said that the idea had been generally disseminated by means of circulars sent out by the Post-master-General that Senators and Representatives were guilty of gross frauds in their abuse of the franking privilege. So far as he was personally concerned he did not believe any fraud had been practiced in the manner complained of. He would favor the proposed reform, but did not believe it would materially reduce the expenditure, as the mails would have to be carried, and if the Government did not pay for it out of one pocket it would out of another.

Mr. WILSON thought Congress should feel grateful to the Post-Office Department for its efforts to aid in abolishing that which, experience had shown, to be a burden upon, rather than a privilege for, Congressmen.

Mr. COLE did not favor the abolition of the privilege as a measure of economy, believing that the mail contract would not be reduced in amount of expense to the Government by reform. He intimated that he was not averse to the present franking as an experiment.

Mr. BAYARD said he had been informed by a businessman, whose name appeared among the signers of the petition for the abolition of the franking privilege, that he had taken action in the matter under the impression, from which the impression was that he had been instructed by his official chief, (among the names of signers) he recognized in those several of his constituents, who, within two weeks, had received, under frank, public documents which in bulk contained the whole of the mail matter to which the news correspondents would amount within the entire session.

Mr. THURMAN presented a petition on the same subject, and said the Postmaster-General, in yielding and sending to his more subordinates the order that they, in sending their printed matter by the conformation of the Senate, but at his instigation, instructions to procure signatures of persons to in Senate Congressional Reports was a gross and scandalous abuse, and an precedent in this or any other country. The various petitions on the subject were referred to the Committee on Post-Offices.

THE SEMINOLE CASES.

Mr. SUMNER presented a memorial of W. C. HARRIS, asking certain jurisdiction so as to enable him and associates to connect the Half-Breed Seminoles of the Kingdom of Belgium by direct telegraphic or telephonic cable, including a transfer of the telegraph concession. Referred.

THE INCOME TAX.

Mr. SHERMAN, from the Committee on Finance, reported with a verbal amendment, the House joint resolution to construe the law relating to the tax on salaries, declaring the meaning of the act to be, that the tax shall be collected until the end of the year 1870. Upon his (Sherman's) motion the Senate proceeded to consider the bill.

Mr. SHERMAN explained that to the army the Army pay agent, taxes salaries for the entire year, and not been deducted in accordance with an opinion of the Judge-Advocate-General, while the deduction had been made in the civil service. The effect of the bill would not be to extend the time of the imposition of the tax, but was merely declaratory.

Mr. THURMAN and Mr. BAYARD spoke briefly; and Mr. WILSON suggested that the Committee might to report a Bill to relieve army officers entirely from the tax, when the bill then went over for the present.

BUREAU OF EDUCATION.

Mr. PATTERSON introduced a bill to abolish the Freedmen's Bureau and provide for a Bureau of education.

SUFFRAGE—A SIXTEENTH AMENDMENT.

Mr. POMEROY introduced a bill proposing an amendment to the Constitution of the United States, submitting to the States the following article, to be known as the Sixteenth Amendment, which, when ratified by three-fourths thereof, shall be part of the Constitution of the United States:

The basis of suffrage in the United States shall be that of citizenship, and all native and naturalized citizens shall enjoy the same rights and privileges of elective franchise. Each state shall determine for itself the age of the citizen and the time of residence required to entitle the citizen to vote, subject to laws which shall apply equally to all citizens, and shall make all laws in regard to the time and place of holding elections.

It was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary, and ordered to be printed.

THE ADMISSION OF VIRGINIA.

The Virginia bill was taken up.

Mr. NORTON, who had the floor, referred to circumstances attending to holding of the Military Commission in Georgia to prove upon the statements of members of the Georgia Legislature, claiming that they vindicated the correctness of his previous statement concerning unwarranted assumption of power in that State.

Mr. TRUMBULL said he had carefully abstained from intruding his views upon the Senate during the present discussion, but now felt compelled to reply to various innuendoes and assertions of a personal character. He had read from the official report in the Congressional Globe remarks made by Mr. SUMNER, in the course of a discussion on a previous evening, upon the subject of a misunderstanding between Senators upon an alleged agreement to vote upon the Virginia bill on the previous Monday. Notwithstanding various Senators had said their understanding of the agreement was identical with his own, the Senator from Massachusetts went on to express his surprise that any such understanding should have existed, and to impugn his (Mr. TRUMBULL's) motives in sustaining the position he had taken. Previous to this that Senator had asserted that certain loyal men of Virginia had knocked at the door of the Judiciary Committee, asking to be heard and to set forth the condition of things in that State. Yet, the untruthfulness of this and similar statements was shown by a memorandum at the door of the Committee, who said no such persons, singly or together, had approached the door at any time; and, notwithstanding the expression of regret by all the members of the Judiciary Committee at the assertions of Mr. SUMNER that any person was denied access to that Committee, that Senator not only insisted upon the correctness of what he had asserted, but actually afterwards inquired (as shown by the report) whether he (Mr. TRUMBULL) did not mean to call him a liar. That was the insinuation by each of the members of the Judiciary Committee, that Senator still insisted upon the correctness of what he had said, refusing to admit corrections. The character of one CHARLES H. FOSTER, with whom that Senator had held intercourse in the Senate, as a representative of the loyal people of Virginia, and for whom he claimed the privileges of the floor, was shown by the published report of a trial of that person by court martial for using seditious language and other offences. The language referred to, uttered during the war, was that its author "would rather live under the Government of JEFF. DAVIS than under that of ABRAHAM LINCOLN; that the United States Government was a humbug;" and expressions of that tenor.

Mr. TRUMBULL continued in further exposition of the alleged untruthfulness and injustice of assertions from this same source, remarking that he was amused to hear himself charged by inference to the use of such impudent assumptions all his self-assumed infallibility, in regard to the recent election in Virginia, the assertion that it was a huge fraud was founded by the report of General CANBY. In answer to his inquiries upon this subject, he quoted from the records of the Senate to show that Republican Senators had voted, without one exception, for the bill for the more efficient government of the rebel states, which contained the right of suffrage on colored men throughout the South. The exception was the case of the Massachusetts Senator. Upon the passage of the bill to submit the Fifteenth Amendment to the States, the same thing was repeated, that Senator refusing to vote for it for the same reason that governed his action in the other case, which was that his own idea of the kind of suffrage which should be conferred had been blindly adopted by the rest of the Republican Senators. If the Senator's assurance and effrontery was such that he could not resist his inclination to assail others, he must gird his armor about him lest it be stripped off and expose him to the American people as an impracticable obstacle in the way of legislation.

The Chair suggested that the personal application of the word effrontery was not strictly in accordance with the rules of parliamentary order.

Mr. TRUMBULL disclaimed a purpose to violate any rule of order, but reminded the Chair that some limit might be allowed, inasmuch as his remarks had been denounced as preposterous and absurd, and the charge made that he was attempting to impose upon the Senate. He said he will I remembered the day when the Senator from Massachusetts and his colleague, the gallants of Southern Senators belonging to the then dominant party, and feared that the Senator had too well followed the example of those domineering slaveholders. The Senator was the peer of those who assailed him, but his attack upon the national character of a State was upon a party who could not reply.

Mr. SUMNER replied that the Senator from Illinois ran into the region of personality. A bird flew in the air; a fish swam in the sea. As for himself he would not be drawn aside from the strictest discussion of the question before by that Senator. He would ask how that Senator dared speak of himself? Did not the Senate know that from the first day the proposition was introduced into this Chamber to confer suffrage upon the colored race, down to the final triumph, the Senator had been its persistent enemy? When called upon to vote for the 15th Amendment, was not his unrelenting opposition encountered? As the representative of the Ku-klux Klan he was willing to see the State handed over to that influence. When a just House of Representatives dragged to this bar the greatest enemy of reconstruction—the President of the United States—the Senator threw over that person that the protection of his vote. Upon the question should ANDREW JOHNSON be expelled from office, so that reconstruction might have free course, the freedmen protected and the Ku-klux clan driven out, the Senator found a technical argument in favor of the criminal. Mr. SUMNER continued in a similar strain. Referring to the charge that upon the passage of the great measure relating to the rights of the colored people he had declined to vote for the measure, he explained that he was absent from the Senate on account of his origin and illness; though the bill did not, in his judgment, furnish to the freedmen sufficient guarantee of protection. He was compelled to leave the Chamber after midnight, and did not absent himself in order to avoid recording his vote.

During the delivery of his remarks, Mr. SUMNER was assumed by the Chair that, applying to another Senator the language "he poured out his venom," he had violated parliamentary decorum.

Mr. SUMNER disclaimed any improper intention, and continued quoting from letters of correspondence and speeches purporting to have been made by Governor WALKER, to show the revolutionary intent and disloyal sympathies of the people of Virginia.

Upon the conclusion of Mr. SUMNER's remarks, the Chair stated the question to be upon the pending amendment of Mr. DRAKE to admit Virginia upon fundamental conditions, by prohibiting any change or amendment of the State Constitution to deprive citizens of their right to vote under the same, who are entitled to vote, except in punishment for crime, but permitting any alteration in the Constitution prospective in its effects in regard to time and place of residence of voters.

Mr. SUMNER moved to insert in the amendment the words "or held office," so as to prevent exclusion from office, executive, by a change of the State Constitution, of any person now allowed to hold office.

The question was presented to vote in accordance with the previous arrangement.

The amendment of Mr. SUMNER was rejected by yeas 25, nays 31.

Mr. MCCREARY announced that he had paired off upon all votes on Virginia with Mr. CAMERON, who was absent.

A vote was then taken on the amendment of Mr. DRAKE, when it was adopted by yeas 31, nays 26, as follows:

YEAS—Messrs. Abbott, Anthony, Bayard, Brownlow, Buckingham, Carpenter, Chandler, Cole, Conkling, Corbett, Creswell, Dixon, Doolittle, Ferry, Gilbert, Harlan, Hamlin, Hill, Howe, Howard, Howe, Kellogg, McDonald, Morrill of Maine, Morton, Nye, Patterson, Pomeroy, Pratt, Ramsey, Rice, Robertson, Spencer, Sumner, Thayer, Wilson, Yates—31.

NAYS—Messrs. Bayard, Casserly, Davis, Fowler, Hamilton, Norton, Saulsbury, Stockton, Thurman, Vickers—10.

Before the commencement of the vote Mr. KELLOGG, who was occupying a seat next that of Mr. SUMNER, who was present without voting, asked for the reading of the sixteenth rule of the Senate, which requires Senators present to vote on a call of yeas and nays, unless specially excused.

The rule was read, but no action was taken in the matter.

The Chair gave notice that any manifestation of approval or disapproval by the galleries upon the announcement of the vote would be a violation of the rules, and then declared the result of the vote.

On motion of Mr. SHERMAN the Currency bill was taken up and laid over on orders.

The Senate then (at 5:20 o'clock) adjourned till Monday.

THE VIRGINIA BILL AS PASSED.

The following is the Virginia bill as it passed the Senate:

AN ACT to admit the state of Virginia to representation in the Congress of the United States:

Whereas, the people of Virginia have framed and adopted a Constitution of State Government which is republican; and

Whereas, the Legislature of Virginia, elected under said Constitution, have ratified the Fourteenth and Fifteenth Amendments to the Constitution of the United States; and

Whereas, the performance of these several acts, in good faith, was a condition precedent to the representation of the state in Congress;

Therefore, be it enacted, &c., That the said state of Virginia is entitled to representation in the Congress of the United States, provided that unless any member of the Legislature of said State shall take and subscribe an oath of office, he shall take and subscribe and file in the office of the Secretary of State of Virginia, for permanent preservation, an oath in the following words:

I, ——, do solemnly swear that I have never taken an oath as a member of Congress, or as an officer of the United States, or as a member of any State Legislature, or as an executive or judicial officer of any state to support the Constitution of the United States, and afterwards engaged in insurrection or rebellion against the same, or given aid or comfort to the enemies thereof; so help me God. Or each person shall in like manner take, subscribe and file the following oath:

I, ——, do solemnly swear that I have, by act of Congress of the United States, been relieved from the effect of the 3d section of the 14th Amendment to the Constitution of the United States; so help me God, which oath shall be taken before and certified by any officer lawfully authorized to administer the same; and any person who shall knowingly swear falsely in taking either of such oaths shall be adjudged guilty of perjury, and shall be punished therefor by imprisonment, not less than one year and not more than ten years, and shall be fined not less than $1,000 and not more than $10,000, and in all cases for any violation of this act the certificate of the taking of either of said oaths with proof of the signature of the person by whom signed shall be taken and filed as conclusive evidence that such oath was lawfully and regularly administered by competent authority; and Provided, further, That every such person who shall neglect for the period of ten days next after the passage of this act to take, subscribe and file such oath as aforesaid, shall be deemed and taken to all intents and purposes to have vacated his office.

And provided further, that the State of Virginia is admitted to representation in Congress upon the following fundamental conditions: That the Constitution of Virginia shall never be so amended or changed as to deprive any citizen or class of citizens of the United States of the right to vote who are entitled to vote by the Constitution herein recognized, except as a punishment for such crimes as are now felonies at common law, whereof they shall have been duly convicted under laws equally applicable to all the inhabitants of said State, provided that any alteration of said Constitution, prospective in its effects, may be made in regard to the time and place of residence of voters; that it shall never be lawful for the same State to deprive any citizen of the United States, on account of race, color, or previous condition of servitude, of the right to hold office under the Constitution and laws of said State, or upon any such ground to require of him any other qualifications for office than such as are required of all other citizens; that the Constitution of Virginia shall never be so changed as to deprive any citizen, or class of citizens of the United States of the school rights and privileges secured by the Constitution of said State.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

Mr. SCHENCK, Chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means, asked and obtained leave for that Committee to sit during the sessions of the House, and at the same time notified the House that he expected, very early next week, probably on Monday, to report to the House the revision of the Tariff bill, and that after its being reported and ordered to be printed, he would move, at the first fitting opportunity, to go into Committee of the Whole, to take up the revision of the Internal Tax law.

Mr. GARFIELD rose and obtained leave for the Committee on Banking and Currency to sit during the sessions of the House.

PETITIONS.

Mr. KETCHUM presented two petitions, numerously signed, from citizens of Hudson and Kinderhook, N. Y., for the abolition of the franking privilege. Similar petitions were presented by Mr. STEVENS, from citizens of Peterboro, N. H.; by Mr. STARKWEATHER, from citizens of Connecticut, and by Mr. ELIOT, from citizens of Otsego, Chenango and Delaware Counties.

MR. BUTLER ON THE FINANCES.

The House proceeded as the business of the morning hour to the consideration of private bills.

After several bills were reported and acted upon, Mr. BUTLER, of Massachusetts, moved to reconsider the vote by which one of them was passed. He said he proposed to call the attention of the House briefly to the matter of the finances, which might be affected by these bills. Hoped he might not be interrupted. He was obliged to review the statement of his colleague, (Mr. DAWES), which was calculated to make, and had in fact made, a false impression. However false, on the contrary, that may have been intended, the whole argument of the learned Chairman of Appropriations had come from a false understanding of the facts.

The point of order was made by Mr. SHANKLIN, of Missouri, and afterwards by Mr. RANDALL, that the remarks of the gentleman from Massachusetts were not in order, as being irrelevant to the question before the House.

Mr. DAWES made several appeals to the members to withdraw the objection to his colleague's proceeding.

Mr. RANDALL withdrew from the point of order, but it was renewed and insisted upon by Mr. SHANKLIN, and the Speaker sustained the point of order.

Mr. BUTLER remarked that it was hard to choke him off. [Laughter.] He proposed to show that the Administration was not so entirely grant as had been represented.

Mr. BENJAMIN insisted on the enforcement of the rulings, and Shelby Mr. BUTLER, after yielded to the apparent interlocutory objection, and gave notice that he would, after the morning hour, move to go into Committee of the Whole, if a number of private bills were then reported, among them one by Mr. WASHBURNE, of Massachusetts, allowing Mr. Hall to S. & H. Bayles, of Kilbourn, Conn., for satisfaction of an army and civilian claim. Pending its consideration, the morning hour expired, and the House went into Committee of the Whole, Mr. JUDD in the chair.

The intention of the House in going into Committee was to give Mr. BUTLER, of Massachusetts, the opportunity to make his speech in reply to Mr. DAWES, but Mr. WILSON, of Ohio, who was first entitled to the floor, in Committee, insisted on his rights, and declined to yield the floor to Mr. BUTLER, or any other man, a charge of prevarication which caused a good deal of laughter.

GENERAL DEBATE—TARIFFS.

Mr. WILSON then proceeded to address the Committee in the interests of agriculture.

Mr. ELA addressed the Committee in favor of the reduction of the tariff duties on all materials that enter into manufacture. The tariff was to-day taxing itself to an extent which stagnated commerce, and caused shipping to decline. Whenever this country could receive the export from abroad the decline of American shipping. In order to bring this about taxation must be reduced. This would relieve the people and enable them to produce manufacturing for export, which would lead to the prices of goods to the market of imports. How was this to be done? The first thing was to stop every unnecessary expenditure; to stop at once and forever all wasteful grants of lands and subsidies to build railroads over the wilderness, which enslaves the population so that it cannot be productive, and at the same time adds largely as the expenses of the Government. There must be no purchases of coinage or treasury; no entangling arrangements for money. The interest on the public debt must be reduced. That could be done by a Funding bill at 4½ per cent.

THE CURRENCY QUESTION.

Mr. COBURN addressed the Committee on the question of finance, and against any modification of the currency. He said that if the plan of a redistribution of the currency had succeeded at the last Congress, the agitation would have been now in process of regeneration, affording relief to the country. Now, the fact is that the whole country is in the throes of agitation, and this was the origin of the sudden rise of some for free national banking. This expedient, with the glittering name, was resorted to to prevent redistribution. Free banking, with a currency redeemable in greenbacks, would be weak and illimitable as the paper of Arkansas. With a circulation redeemable in gold, it would be a measure of extreme contraction. Neither policy would do. Expansion, if resorted to, should be practised moderately and to a definite amount; as though it had been done in the shape of legal tender currency, rather than in bank currency. Legal tender currency would, if then withdrawn and bank notes substituted, coin would be necessary, and would become more scarce and dear. The banks would take the alarm and withdraw their circulation, and the result would be a hoarding of gold, a redring of bank notes, and a consequent scarcity. He denied that the substitution of bank notes for greenbacks would make an elastic currency. Its elasticity would be in the shape of shrinkage, for coin was not in sense elastic. It could be withdrawn, or locked up, or exported, or depended upon trade to carry it out, or in the policy of the free bank paper would depend upon the caprice of speculators. Stability was better than elasticity. Abundance made low rates of interest. The argument made that the high prices of commodities showed that the country had a redundant currency, was not sound. He denied the premises. The prices of many of the great staples of trade were as low as, and lower, than in 1860 and 1861. So this was all false clamor. The people had been prospering, and were not grumbling on account of a redundant currency. Failures were fewer than formerly. The country, infinitely better able to do without coin, if it could not keep it. It could not come down to Old World wages and prices to please the gold worshippers. Instead of cutting down currency they had better cut down expenses and taxes. It was bad policy to pay off the debt now, as the attempt would only cripple the finances. The results of a national currency produced by the liberal financial policy, were worth 100 years of cramps and chills and contractions, low wages, low prices and languishing business.

PERSONAL EXPLANATIONS.

Mr. MERCUR made a personal explanation in regard to a charge of repudiation against Allegheny County, Pennsylvania, so far as Mr. MOORHEAD was identified with it, which was recently referred to by Mr. WOODWARD.

Mr. KELSEY explained that having given a political error he had made a mistake the other day, in stating that the first Bessemer steel rails had been imported in 1865, when gold was about 200. The first importation was really made in 1864, when gold ranged considerably above 200, and the lowest price at which the rails could be imported was ten per ton. The high price developed two factories, and in the latter part of the next year, the canvassers of these works canvassed the market at $160, and this statement was confirmed by what the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. TWITCHELL) said yesterday.

Mr. DAWES made a brief address of the Committee on the subject of the finances, contending that the currency was not redundant.

Mr. STOUGHTON also addressed the Committee on the same subject, and then the Committee rose, and the House, at 4:20, adjourned with the understanding that the session to-morrow shall be for debate only.

Intelligence Direct from Port-au-Prince.

The Details of the Downfall at Salnave—His Flight and Narrow Escape from Death—Action of the Victorious Party—A Provisional Government Formed.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Saturday, Jan. 8, 1870.

The insurgent forces have at length captured this place, and SALNAVE has fled from the city, leaving fully one-third of it in ruins. The attack upon Port-au-Prince, by the revolutionists, was commenced on the morning of the 15th of December, at about 4 o'clock. At that hour the rebel steamers, three in number, made their appearance in the harbor of Port-au-Prince and seized SALNAVE's last vessel, the Terreur, lying at anchor in the harbor. Immediately after General BRICE landed, with about 1,500 men. An engagement followed, and, after a sharp struggle, the insurgents carried the northern lines of the town. These were held by General BRICE until 11 o'clock in the forenoon of the 19th, at which time he received reinforcements. SALNAVE, finding that things were growing desperate, retired to the National Palace, from whence he dispatched his trusty VIL LUMIS at the head of his guards, amounting to 400 men, to attack the insurrectionists. They took with them a piece of ordnance, which for some time made and havoc in the insurgent ranks, but which was eventually captured by a body of volunteers. VIL LUMIS retreated to the Palace. After an hour, however, he returned to his command at Fort Bizoton, and the fighting was continued at intervals during the day, the Arsenal and Fort St. Clair falling into the hands of BRICE before dark.

On the morning of the 19th, General BRICE held a council of war and it was determined that SALNAVE should be attacked in the Palace. The fleet was ordered to prepare for a bombardment, and the Terreur was selected to fire on the Palace. SALNAVE, by this time, saw that to hold out any longer would be useless, and he left, followed by several of his Generals, intending to go to the American Consulate. Before he had mounted his horse, however, a shell from the Terreur struck the Tivoli House, the most magnificent apartment in the building, which was consumed in a short time, and SALNAVE, with a few followers, took the Petionville road. Just about this time Brice was at the northern part of the town, by SALNAVE's citizens, but Captain SAMSON, of Her Britannic Majesty's ship Defiance, with several of his officers and the crew of that vessel, landed, and through their noble exertions the conflagration was subdued and that part of the town was saved from being entirely consumed. It appears that SALNAVE had carried away in vanity at the Palace a large quantity of ammunition. The shells fired from the Terreur, penetrating these vaults, caused several terrific explosions, and the Palace was wholly destroyed. Shortly after SALNAVE's flight, a steamer was dispatched to Lanoite for MESSRS. SACHE, who arrived here on the 8th, where he was received with acclamations.

A few days after the taking of the city, DOMINIQUE, the President of the South, was sent for and a Provisional Government was formed. This Government consists of MESSRS. SACHE, President; DOMINIQUE, Vice President; General T. RAMBAU, Minister of Finance and Commerce; SEPTIMUS RAMBAU, Minister of Justice, and General BRICE, Minister of War. A decree has been issued convoking the Legislative Chamber for the 1st of February, and ordering elections in the counties to fill the vacancies in the Lower House.

VICTORINE CHEVALIER and four other Generals, have been shot by the victorious revolutionists, and twenty-three other military officers of high grade have been prosecuted by the revolutionary Government. Up to the present moment nothing whatever has been heard here of the whereabouts of SALNAVE.

The Great Strike of Operatives at Le Creusot—Its Origin—Movements for its Suppression—The Latest Notes from the Disaffected District.

PARIS, Jan. 21—Evening.—The strike of the operatives at Le Creusot, in the Province of Sarne et Loir, near Dijon, still continues, and is making a profound sensation throughout the country on account of the large number of workmen concerned in it. It is feared by the Government that the example the strikers have set will be followed elsewhere. It was supposed that the strike was brought about by revolutionary agitation, and this idea is strengthened from the fact that their numbers are increasing, and their demands becoming more and more unreasonable. Le Creusot is one of the greatest iron manufacturing towns in Europe, and this defection of the workmen is entailing heavy losses, which increase every day. The primary cause of the strike was a change in the general direction of affairs there, to which the workmen objected. They petitioned for the reinstatement of the old direction, which was refused. A disorderly meeting, the nature of which has not transpired, occurred there yesterday, whereby several of the miners were killed. This has had a tendency to increase the general excitement. The semi-official journals of this city state that the troubles at Le Creusot have been greatly increased by the distribution of extreme Radical journals among the workmen. M. SCHNEIDER, the President of the Senate, and one of the largest proprietors of the works at Le Creusot, has arrived there. Several companies of troops have also arrived on the scene, and others are on the way.

PARIS, Jan. 21—Midnight.—It is now thought that the strike at Le Creusot will not endanger the peace of the country. There are some hopes that an accommodation will be reached to-morrow. A force of 9,000 infantry and 600 cavalry has already arrived at Le Creusot. One of the editors of the Marseillaise who, it is alleged, helped to foment the disorder, has been arrested.

World Action of the German Bishops in the Ecumenical Council—A Scene in the Spanish Cortes—Trial of Radical Journalists in Paris—Death of a British Admiral—Miscellaneous.

ROME, Jan. 21—The German Bishops in attendance at the Ecumenical Council had a meeting to-day, and resolved that unless the number of members in dioceses be taken into consideration in the votes held in the Council they will return home in a body. Their action has caused much excitement....Archbishop DECHAMPS, of Mechlin, who is at the head of the infallibility party in the Ecumenical Council, has been appointed Primate of Belgium.

MADRID, Jan. 21—A stormy scene occurred in the Cortes to-day, in consequence of a students' manifestation in the city. Señor RIVERO declared he would imprison and subject to the tribunals the authors of the disorder, be they old or young. The country should soon see that he was not speaking to the wind. He repeated that he would castigate all disturbers of the public order.

PARIS, Jan. 21—The legal proceedings against the proprietors of the Radical journal Reforme have been terminated. Three of the editors were sentenced to imprisonment for six months, and the manager for seven months....It is thought that the trial of ROCHEFORT will merely result in a fine of a thousand francs....Baron HAUSSMANN, the ex-Prefect of the Seine is dangerously ill.

LONDON, Jan. 21—SIR GEORGE FRANCIS SEYMOUR, Admiral of the Fleet, and for a long time stationed in American waters, died in this city to-day, aged 83 years....Much anxiety has lately been felt here for the safety of the steamship Great Eastern. A vessel which arrived yesterday brings the gratifying news that the steamer was spoken on the 5th of December in the South Atlantic Ocean....A Greek loan of half a million pounds will soon be introduced in the market here.

STATE LEGISLATURES.

The Sectorial Question Decided in Mississippi—The Fifteenth Amendment not yet Ratified by Iowa—Proceedings in Other States.

MEMPHIS, Jan. 20.—A special dispatch to the Avalanche from Jackson, Miss., to-night, says:

"The Legislature has elected Governor ALCORN United States Senator for the long term, beginning March, 1871, and General AMES for the short term. W. H. REVELS, (colored,) a native, and educated in Ohio, at present State Senator from Natchez, was also elected for the term expiring March, 1871, to which Mr. SHARKEY was elected but was not admitted. The Legislature adopted a resolution memorializing Congress to remove the political disabilities from all Mississippians, to be presented by Mr. REVELS, together with his credentials as United States Senator. The Legislature adjourned to meet on the second Tuesday after the admission of the State."

CHICAGO, Ill., Jan. 21.—A special dispatch to the Tribune from Des Moines says: "The Iowa Senate to-day, after considerable debate, by a vote of 32 to 14, refused to concur in the House resolution ratifying the Fifteenth Amendment to the United States Constitution. The majority of the Senate claim that the House should have taken their resolutions as they were and adopted them, and not have passed a new series of their own. The result is, that only one House has, as yet, ratified the Fifteenth Amendment."

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 20.—The Fifteenth Amendment still hangs fire in the Legislature. Both Houses have postponed discussion of the subject several times.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Jan. 21.—Concurrent resolutions were introduced into the Lower House of the Kansas Legislature to-day, asking Senators ROSS and POMEROY and Representative CLARKE to resign, their influence having been impaired by circumstances growing out of the impeachment

THE STATE CANALS.

First Popular Meeting of the Canal Union at Rochester—The Speech of Ex-Governor Seymour—The Resolutions, and Speeches upon Them—Effect of the Convention.

From Our Special Correspondent.

ROCHESTER, Tuesday, Jan. 18, 1870.

On the 16th of October last a Convention was held in the City of New-York for the purpose of considering the condition of the canals of the State, and of devising plans to remedy existing evils. Many schemes were suggested and various systems proposed; but to give efficacy to any of these the necessity for a permanent organization was realized. Out of this Convention grew the "Commercial Union," an organization composed of the leading business men of the State interested in the welfare of the canals, and having its headquarters in the Metropolis. Hon. NATHANIEL SANDS, of New-York, whose large experience in directing such enterprises was recognized, was elected President of the Union. Quietly, but steadily, the work of organization has been going on, until sub-unions have been established in all of the principal cities along the line of the canals of the State, composed of influential men of both political parties. Within the next six months hundreds of these unions will have been formed, numbering 50,000 members, and wielding an influence and power that will force the predominating party in the State to listen to its voice and heed its suggestions.

THE FIRST POPULAR MEETING.

The first popular meeting under the auspices of the Union was held in the Corinthian Hall, in the City of Rochester, to-day. The attendance was very large, filling the body of the large hall. Hon. NATHANIEL SANDS, of New-York, was unanimously elected President of the Convention. In taking his seat he briefly explained the objects of the Convention, indicating very forcibly that business was the paramount object. A large number of Vice-Presidents were appointed, all gentlemen either of local or national reputation, and also a Committee on Resolutions, with Hon. D. J. MITCHELL, of Syracuse, Chairman, was appointed. Letters, pledging the support of the movement and cordially indorsing its objects, were read from Hon. E. B. CONSOLLY, of New-York; Wm. E. DODGE, President of the New-York Board of Trade; PETER COOPER, Esq., Hon. W. F. ALLEN, Hon. ASHER P. NICHOLS, of Buffalo, and others.

SPEECH OF GOVERNOR SEYMOUR.

Ex-Governor SEYMOUR addressed the Convention at length:

He deprecated the present system of canal management, strenuously advocated the reduction of tolls to the lowest possible rates, urging that the abolition of tolls would tend to secure the produce of the West and to keep this commerce from seeking other channels. He vehemently urged the annihilation of the contract system, believing it pernicious and ruinous, leading to peculation and frauds, crippling the canals and depleting the treasury. He urged, with great force, the lodging of more power in the hands of the Canal Commissioners. They should have the authority to personally superintend and order the necessary repairs. Their position necessarily familiarized them with the wants of the canals, and they should be held responsible for the work where the work should be done and what it should cost. He advocated, also, the establishment of a strong police along the line of the canal, whose duty should be to protect the boatmen, assist those who were in trouble, and report delinquencies of officials. He cited the fact that while Governor, he issued over three hundred commissions to special policemen on the Erie Railroad, and insisted that the canal needed such a force to keep order and insure safety. Power on the canals had been misplaced; it was placed in the hands of officials whose duties compelled them to remain close within their office at Albany, away from the canals. He insisted that this power should be given to the Commissioners, they were acquainted with the frauds and were in sympathy with the people. The canals were choked with weeds, choked with rolls, and when they took out two feet of mud they put in four feet of rolls. The canals were not made for the purpose of revenue; they who so conceived did not appreciate the spirit of those who built them. He graphically demonstrated the effect of high tolls, showing how commerce went into other channels, and so lost to our State, and especially to our great Metropolis, the fruits of the industry and the thrift of the West. In concluding, he assured the Convention of his warmest sympathy in every effort calculated to bring about the reforms which the Commercial Union intend to secure.

Governor SEYMOUR'S speech, which was free from all party allusions, was cheered by men of all parties, and was enthusiastically applauded. The Governor spoke under personal disadvantages, his arm yet being confined in a sling, the result of a dislocated shoulder received from a fall from his carriage.

THE RESOLUTIONS.

At the conclusion of Governor SEYMOUR'S speech, the Convention took a recess until afternoon. On assembling, Hon. D. J. MITCHELL submitted the report of the Committee on Resolutions. Briefly, they recommend:

1. Legislative action respecting the management of canals. 2. Reduction of canal tolls, so as to make it the great highway for Western trade for transportation. 3. To make transportation speedy and certain by the introduction of a system of repairs which shall make breaks and delays unnecessary and avoidable. 4. Funding the canal debt, payable in eighteen years.

ISRAEL T. HATCH, of Buffalo, seconded the resolutions in an able speech, in which he couldn't resist giving Mr. GREELEY a hit at his Constitutional Convention proposition to sell the canals, congratulating that gentleman on his recent return to sounder views as evinced in his late lectures, and in which Mr. GREELEY stated that for every million the State had expended on canals it had received one hundred millions in return. Mr. HATCH urged the funding process as the only way in which the canals could be made free. The principle of free inland navigation was recognized when the canal of Lauzelotte was built, the first canal in Europe, and such tolls only were placed on it as should keep it in repair, and these tolls were given to the engineer who constructed it, and are in the family to-day. If it succeeded in Europe it should here.

OTHER SPEECHES.

E. E. DAVIS, of Champlain, Hon. D. J. MITCHELL, Hon. CHARLES A. STANFORD, Hon. H. L. FISH and S. B. GUTHRIE, of the Board of Trade of Buffalo, addressed the Convention at considerable length. Senator STANFORD was particularly severe on Auditor BELL for his advocacy of the contract system, insisting that that BELL had a ring of peculiarly unpleasant sound. Among the most prominent members of the Convention were the delegates from the Board of Trade of New-York, whose presence in the Convention added weight to its deliberations and contributed largely to its success. Their presence assured the people of the interior that the merchants and capitalists of the Metropolis were at last awake, not only to the interests of the State but to the welfare and prosperity of the great City they represented.

EFFECT OF THE CONVENTION.

The Convention adjourned at 5 o'clock, after the unanimous adoption of a well-merited complimentary resolution to the Imperial President, Mr. SANDS, and a resolution of thanks to the hospitable citizens of Rochester, who handsomely entertained. In their luxurious house, the delegates from abroad. The effect of the Convention can now be hardly estimated; it is the beginning, however, of a work destined to revolutionize the present canal system. In it are interested those who are in earnest, who fully realize the magnitude of their labor, who appreciate its difficulties, but who will never stop short of success. And in this reform they should have the hearty sympathy of the people everywhere. W. F. R.

Curious Treatment for Rheumatism—A Crate of Hot Water Drank Every Three Minutes.

From the Cincinnati Commercial, Jan. 19.

A German peddler by the name of GEORGE SIMM, who lived at No. 440 Race-street, died about 7 o'clock yesterday morning from the effects of a peculiar mode of medical treatment, advised by a man of the name of OTTO ARCHENBOHR, who had recently been employed as porter at Lowen Garden, and who professed to know all about the disease which he undertook to cure. It appeared that ARCHENBOHR called upon SIMM at his house, on Monday afternoon, and engaged to cure him of rheumatism, with which he had been afflicted for several years, in the brief space of twenty-four hours, provided he followed his directions. His specious remedy for the malady

POLICE TRIALS.

An Extraordinary Coincidence—Serious Grave Charges Investigated.

Commissioners SMITH and MANNERS yesterday divided between them a calendar of some eighty cases of charges against policemen for transgressions of the rules and improper conduct. The majority of these cases involved the usual offences of being off post and late at roll call, but some of them were of graver character.

CHARLES H. MCDONALD, of the Twenty-fourth Precinct, was arraigned on a charge of intoxication. Captain CAFFERTY and Sergeants JARRIS and MURPHY all testified that McDONALD was not fit for duty at 5 P. M., for the four until 4 o'clock, and at 7:40 P. M. returned to the Station House, hung up his club and belt, and said he was going to supper. As he had partaken of that meal only an hour previously, this remark occasioned great surprise. Captain Lieutenant Gunther, Captain Terry and both Sergeants became convinced that McDONALD was intoxicated, and the Captain ordered him to bed. McDONALD told a long and rambling story, of which Rhine wine was the chief ingredient, but denying that he was intoxicated. The case, however, was referred to the Board.

A number of patrolmen of the Fifth Precinct were arraigned on charges of failing to arrest or detect the persons guilty of certain thefts and burglaries. THOMAS BOLT allowed a burglary to be perpetrated during the night of the 8th, at No. 104 Franklin-street; and WINZIAR H. BYRNES failed to arrest the thief who, between 2 and 3 A. M. of the same night, broke the large plate glass window of the store No. 308 Broadway, and stole property valued at $100. Both these cases were referred to the Board. The complaints against CHRISTOPHER TAYLOR and GEORGE W. FUTCHER for sleeping in a hallway at Reade and Greenwich-and Canal-street, were dismissed.

HENRY S. COY of the Sixteenth Precinct, was called to answer a charge of improper conduct. MICHAEL LYNCH, No. 27 Tenth-avenue, testified that at 2:45 A.M. of the 6th inst. he was in a saloon at the corner of Eighth-avenue and Twenty-second-street, where COY came in and without provocation assaulted him and after going out waited for LYNCH and when the latter came out arrested him, but released him before getting to the Station House. LYNCH, however, went there and was making a complaint against COY, when he came in and was about to resume his assault upon LYNCH, but said he had only had some words with him in consequence of an old quarrel between them. The case was referred to the Board.

Call for a Temperance Convention.

In accordance with the instructions of the State Temperance Committee, and the recommendation of the State Temperance Society, at its late meeting in Amsterdam, notice is given that a Temperance Convention, to consist of two delegates for each Assembly District in this State, will be held in the City of Albany on Wednesday, the 16th day of March, 1870, at 10 o'clock A. M., to take into consideration the organization of the temperance voters of the State. It is expected that the friends of the movement will take immediate measures to secure Assembly District Conventions, to have every district fully represented by delegates and alternates.

The Merchants' National Bank Retaining Oakley's Bail Fixed at $150,000.

An order of arrest, granted ex parte by Judge CARDOZO, sitting at the Chambers of the Supreme Court, against Mr. E. J. OAKLEY, the defaulting cashier of the Merchants' National Exchange Bank, has been served upon that individual in a civil suit, and the amount of bail was fixed at the sum of $150,000. Mr. OAKLEY not being able to give that amount of bail the Sheriff of New-York yesterday took him into custody and consigned him to Ludlow-street Jail. The whole case will be duly brought before the Court upon a motion to discharge the party from arrest or to reduce the amount of bail.

One War to Raise the Wind.

JOHN MCCARTHY, alias William H. Reeves, was arraigned before Justice DOWLING yesterday, at the Tombs, to answer a charge of forgery. It appears that Messrs. WILLIAM V. TEMPLE & Co., of No. 56 Broadway, West Washington Market, received a quantity of beef valued at $1,800, from NELSON MORRIS & Co., of Chicago, and were exhibiting it for sale, when the prisoner came and demanded a sheet of authority of the same firm, permitting certain bills of lading, on planks of the Michigan Central Railroad, in which WILLIAM H. REEVES was made the consignee. While the New-York dealers were preparing to pay the accused the cash for the beef, a telegram arrived from the freight agent stating that the bills were forged. Pending the arrival of Chicago witnesses, the prisoner was remanded for examination. There are other charges against MCCARTHY, involving problems of a more complicated character. These embrace a forgery in a new one, and would have proved successful but for the timely discovery of the fraud by the railroad officials.

REVERSED UPON AND NEW BLOCK PAVEMENT.

In re the Application of Cornelius Vanderbilt et al. vs. Tweed et al. Commissioners for Laying Right-of-way through Fourth Avenue and Fifty-eighth-street. This is an appeal by the Commissioners, from an order made by Judge Cardozo in December last, vacating an assessment upon certain premises, for the purpose of laying down a new block pavement, between Fourth-avenue and Fifty-eighth-street. The assessment was vacated because it appeared that the cost of the new block was $3 or $4 more than the price of Nicholson block was 25 cents per square foot. The petitioners took the ground that the cost of the Nicholson was not material, and that the Commissioners were bound to lay down the best pavement. The Commissioners claimed that they had a discretion in the matter, and that the cost was material. The Court of Appeals in the case of Hayden vs. Commissioners of Parks, decided that the Commissioners were bound to lay down the best pavement, and that the cost was not

NEWS OF THE DAY.

EUROPE.

The strike of the operatives at Le Creusot still continues, and is creating a "profound sensation." From the number engaged in it fears are entertained that the example thus set will be followed. Le Creusot is one of the greatest iron manufacturing towns in Europe. The cause of the strike was a change in the general direction and the refusal by those in authority to restore the old order of affairs, as asked for in a petition from the workmen.... Afterrible accident, which occurred on Thursday, and by which a number of miners were killed, has also added to the excitement. Troops have arrived in the disaffected district, and more are on their way. An editor of the Marseillaise, who, it is reported, helped to foment the disorder, it is said, has been arrested....Baron HAUSSMANN is again reported seriously ill....The proceedings against the proprietors of the Réveil have been ended. Three for the editors were sentenced to six months, and the manager to seven months imprisonment....The trial of ROCHEFORT, it is thought, will result in a fine of 1,000 francs.... Archbishop DECHAMPS, of Mecklin, who is said to be the leader of the infallibility party in the Ecumenical Council, has been made Primate of Belgium....The Great Eastern, in regard to the safety of which much anxiety has been felt in London, was spoken on the 8th of December in the South Atlantic Ocean....Sir GEORGE FRANCIS SEYMOUR, Admiral in the British navy, died in London yesterday, aged 80 years....A Greek loan of $600,000 is soon to be put upon the London market....A stormy scene is represented to have occurred in the Spanish Cortes, at Madrid, yesterday, in consequence of a students' demonstration in the city. CONGRESS.

In the Senate, yesterday, a memorial was presented, signed by 2,400 army officers, asking for increased pay. The presentation of several petitions for the abolition of the franking privilege led to quite a discussion on the subject, in which the action of the Postmaster-General in forwarding petitions and blanks free of charge through the mails was severely criticised. Bills were introduced by Mr. PATTERSON to abolish the Freedmen's Bureau, and to provide for a Bureau of Education; and by Mr. POMEROY proposing a Sixteenth Amendment to the Constitution providing for universal suffrage. The discussion of the Virginia bill was ended and the vote taken. Mr. DRAKE's amendment was adopted by a vote of 31 to 23. It affirms fundamental conditions to the admission of the State, and prohibits any change or amendment to the State Constitution to deprive citizens of the right of franchise who are now entitled to vote, except as a punishment for crime. A further amendment by Mr. DRAKE imposing further conditions that the State should never deprive any citizen, on account of race, color or previous condition of servitude, from holding office was adopted—yeas 26, nays 16. Another amendment by Mr. WILSON in regard to the school rights was adopted by a vote of 31 to 19. The amendments of the House bill was then changed by a substitute setting forth that Virginia had adopted a Constitution republican in form, and that the Legislature elected under it was entitled the Fourteenth and Fifteenth Amendments in good faith as a condition precedent to representation. This substitute was adopted by a vote of 30 to 24. The bill, as amended, was then passed to a third reading by a vote of yeas 47, nays 16. Mr. SUMNER did not vote. The Senate adjourned until Monday.

In the House, but little new business was received, and the day was passed in discussion. Mr. BUTLER made several unsuccessful attempts to obtain the floor and reply to the recent speech of Mr. DAWES on retrenchment. Mr. ELA, of New-Hampshire, addressed the House in favor of a reduction of the tariff on all manufacturing materials; and Mr. COFFROTH, of Indiana, and other members, on the currency question. The House adjourned till to-day.

THE STATE LEGISLATURE.

In the Senate, yesterday, the reports and bills introduced were of no general importance. Mr. GREEN introduced his One Hundred and Twenty-fifth-street City Railway bill, and Mr. NORTON gave notice of a bill to regulate exits and spaces between seats in the theatres and places of amusement of New-York. Of the bills passed was one amending the charter of this City. In Committee, the only business of importance transacted was in regard to the bill extending time for the collection of excise fees in the Metropolitan District. It was amended so as to extend the time to the 1st of March, so reported to the Senate, and ordered to a third reading. The Senate adjourned till Monday evening.

In the Assembly, among the bills introduced were the following: Providing for the payment of wages to railway employes within a specified time, and to improve the water front of New-York City. A resolution providing for an amendment to the State Constitution relative to bribery at elections was laid over. A resolution of inquiry as to what legislation was necessary to prevent encroachments of New-York Harbor by the New-Jersey Railway Company, was carried. The subject of protection and free trade came up on the majority and minority reports of the Select Committee on the resolutions for the removal or reduction of duties on tea, coffee, sugar, iron, steel and salt, and the subject of the tariff was made the special order for Tuesday evening next. The House adjourned until this morning.

GENERAL.

The President has appointed Lieutenant-Governor CONRADE, of Indiana, United States Minister to Portugal, in the place of SHELLABARGER, resigned; and E. S. MANAT, of New-Jersey, Assistant Secretary of Legation at London, vice RABBAU, resigned.

A special dispatch to the Memphis (Tenn.) Avalanche, from Jackson, Miss., states that Generals ALCORN and AMES have been elected United States Senators for the long and short term respectively. W. H. REVERS, (colored,) at present State Senator from Natchez, has been chosen Senator for the term expiring March, 1871, to which Mr. SHARKEY was elected, but not admitted. The Legislature adjourned to meet the second Tuesday after the State was admitted.

The Common Council of Boston on Thursday evening refused to appoint a Committee and to extend the hospitalities of the city to Prince ARTHUR.

The train tendered by the Eastern Railway Company to convey the remains of GEORGE PEABODY from Portland to the place of burial, has been completed in Preston. It consists of a funeral car and two passenger coaches, and is very elegantly draped with the emblems of mourning.

An Omaha dispatch states that forty miles of telegraph lines have been demolished by the recent storm. There is no communication west of Grand Island.

The two thieves who robbed the Glen's Falls Bank, of New-York, some time since, and for whose arrest a reward of $2,000 was offered, it is said, passed through Toledo, on Wednesday night, in charge of New-York officers, who made the arrest at Omaha.

LOCAL.

ELLEN REBECCA UTT, found guilty of having killed her paramour's brother, THOMAS BAXTER, during a drunken brawl at a tenement house in West Broadway, was sentenced to one year's imprisonment in State Prison by Judge BENEDICT in the Court of General Sessions yesterday.

A man giving the name of BODNEY M. POMEROY was yesterday arrested in this City on a charge of having made an extensive series of fraudulent wholesale purchases of goods in this market, ostensibly in behalf of well-known Cincinnati and Philadelphia firms. The prisoner will be given an examination to-day.

Prince ARTHUR, of England, arrived in this City yesterday. In the afternoon he took a ride in the Central Park, and in the evening visited Wallack's Theatre. To-day he starts for Washington.

What the State Canals have Cost, and What they have Earned.

The State Canal Convention, held at Rochester on Wednesday, revives the memory of those olden days when the canals were the mainstay of the State, the chiefest source of its prosperity and the strongest support of the commercial supremacy of the State of New-York. Ex-Governor SEYMOUR presided, and the prominent names in the Convention were those of long-known and successful men. Their action is embodied in the first proposition—to make the canals what they pretend to be and ought to be as waterways; and, secondly, to relieve them from an unnecessarily sharp burden of levies upon their income in order to pay their small remaining debt, at whatever cost to the public welfare.

Many causes have combined to depreciate the credit of the State canal system, the principal one being that, while good in its conception, it has been bad, and worse than bad, in its management. A trunk canal, like the Erie, following the only available continuous water-way between the upper lakes and the ocean, hardly needed an argument in its favor. Its immediate and ultimate cost, and the ability of the State to meet both, was the only consideration. All these contingencies were foreseen and provided for by DE WITT CLINTON and his compeers, who looked upon taxation as something better than a mere makeshift to cover the annual wear and tear of the commonwealth—something which in time should become capital, and yield a fair return.

The fault in the canals lay not so much in the canals themselves as in the building of "Internals" and needless feeders, the votes of whose advocates in the Legislature were wanted in order to accomplish the purposes of the trunk lines. No one who has investigated the subject does or can doubt that the Erie, the Oswego and the Champlain Canals have paid their way, their cost of maintenance and construction, and have also developed resources of wealth and of capacity to endure taxation such as the State had seemingly small reason to anticipate. The original canal was "Clinton's Ditch," the enlarged work was "Buggles' Folly," but every promise and prophecy of those two statesmen has been fulfilled. RUGGLES dreamed dreams, but every vision has become a fact. Hamilton failed in making the proper allowance for stupidity and knavery. He, like GERRITT SMITH, reasoned upon a system of trunk canals,—the Erie to open up the West, the Oswego to garner the harvests of Lake Ontario, and the Champlain to bring into the others the products of Canada and the North. Fastened to these—as in later times to all trunk railroads—are a series of "laterals," the costly and worthless Genesee, the Crooked Lake, Chemung, Cayuga, Chenango, Oneida Improvement, Black River, and others. Some of these may have their use as feeders of water, others may add indirectly to the revenue of canal commerce, yet how much has been gained, allowing much for the inevitable plunder and waste attending public improvements, is no matter of guesswork.

We cannot conveniently segregate as we ought the Erie from the other trunk canals, each in its lesser importance being equally entitled to consideration. Both the Oswego and the Champlain have paid their way, and dollar for dollar, in spite of fraud and political mismanagement, have refunded to the State all they have cost, without reference to the impulse they may have given to the development of the regions they traverse and, consequently, to the taxable capacity of the people whom they benefit. According to the report of the State Engineer for 1868, the Erie Canal has cost the State for original construction over $42,000,000, for interest on construction account over $25,000,000, and for cost of maintenance and interest on maintenance over $31,000,000, making the whole cost of the Erie Canal, its total capital, interest and expense account, from beginning to end, no less than—to be accurate—$148,450,953 40. This is assuredly a large sum for a single public work, nearly all of it constructed in times of profound peace and cheap labor.

But there is an offset. The Erie Canal—and we count interest on this side as well as the other—has paid in tolls over $87,000,000, and in interest on the same over $94,000,000, giving a total income of $181,628,603 83. Deduct from this an allowance which is certainly liberal enough for tolls and the interest thereon, from freights contributed by the lateral canals, and we have a net profit on the Erie Canal, covering all costs of investment and maintenance, of $31,400,027 15. Few public works can show as clean a record, and this with the admission that, except the trunk lines, no canals should have been built after it became evident that railroads are fully competent to the transaction of the immediate local business of well-settled and productive agricultural regions. The three trunks are saddled with the insolvency of the four or five tributaries, yet, grouping the whole together, the careful Buffalo Advertiser, usually accurate and pains-taking in these matters, has shown by official figures that the total cost, including construction, interest, repairs and swindling, of all the canals, good, bad and indifferent, has been only $219,028,529 35; while the offset to that, in tolls and interest has been $203,619,515 08, leaving to be charged against the State a debit of only $7,478,307 27 as the actual amount not yet refunded on the total investment. That is, the canals have not quite paid for themselves as yet.

We have gone further into the financial exhibit than we intended, but the figures will bear investigation. What we mean to assert is, that bad as its management has been—and nothing has been well done—the canal system of New-York can challenge comparison with any railroad which its Legislature has chartered. Placing receipts against expenditures, and one interest account against the other, the canals are a very cheap property. If the State were to sell them at $10,000,000, it would make a small profit and lose a magnificent future. Estimating the impulse they have given to the development of our State, to the opening up of the great West, and to the establishment of our City as the centre of the commerce of the world, they are worth immensely more than they have cost, making all allowance for the demoralization of plunder, which seems to be the inevitable attendant of all great commercial enterprises.

The "Dangerously Filthy" City of New-York.

No one will be surprised at the recommendation of Dr. HARRIS, that a special outlay be incurred for street cleaning. The condition of our thoroughfares is such that some vigorous and speedy action is necessary to accomplish the work that the contractor undertakes to do, but has to a great extent left undone. No less than sixty miles of street surface below the Central Park is reported as urgently needing attention, and the City generally is "dangerously filthy." The same might be said of New-York throughout the year, but the extraordinary Winter through which we are passing creates peculiar liability to various forms of epidemic disease, and the contractor, being bound to exercise double care, is doubly responsible for the extreme hazard to which the population is exposed at this time. And yet the written contract, under which he receives $408,500 a year, expressly states that it was made "to secure clean streets in this City and to protect the public health."

Of course the new expenditure called for will be given; there is, in fact, no help for it. The Board of Health will scrape and sweep where necessary, and leave the dirt in heaps, as it proposes, for Mr. BROWN's carts to carry away. Perhaps, however, he will not even do that part of the labor; and, if not, the whole process will have to be completed without his help. There must be no trifling with the risk of contagious disease, which his neglect has in great part created. Already there have been rumors of smallpox, and though, happily, prompt measures have prevented the few cases heard of from extending, while vaccination has been urged and provided for, the danger is with us. Therefore, if the money that is paid for the performance of the contract is not expended therefor, more money must be put into other hands for the purpose.

The question continually arises, how is it that a public officer can be allowed to go on receiving the allowance made in consideration of a certain duty to be fulfilled, without fulfilling it? The machinery of inspection and auditing and certifying is not wanting. The Street Commissioners are distinctly bound to withhold the fortnightly payments to the contractor, unless they are satisfied that the work stipulated is "well, truly and faithfully" done. Do they so satisfy themselves? That is clearly impossible, for the City is not merely dirty, but "dangerously filthy"—a fact which it did not require Dr. HARRIS' report to establish. Not only is Mr. BROWN faithless to his trust then, but the Commissioners are also to theirs. Our already heavily burdened taxpayers will understand this, of course. They will recognize, more distinctly than ever, that the Street-cleaning Department is a party to unlawful gain. No wonder that the "general impression" has been formed, of which Mr. BROWN is understood to have innocently complained.

Post Office Reforms.

The Postmaster-General did a very good thing the other day when he invited a number of leading Post Office officials to Washington to hold a conference and suggest improvements in the service. Most of their suggestions, or at least those of them on which the outside world is capable of forming an intelligent opinion, were excellent. We spoke with approval a day or two ago of that which proposed the examination of "dead letters," or letters detained for postage in the Post Office to which they are committed. The present plan of dispatching them to Washington is simply senseless and a source of serious inconvenience, and it is based, we think, on a wrong theory of the Post Office. It is no part of the duty of that institution to educate the public in habits of order, or punctuality, or exactness, or to punish persons who show themselves wanting in these virtues. The duty of the Post Office, and, indeed, the whole reason of its existence, is the supply of mail facilities to the public, as it is, and not as it ought to be—that is, with a certain percentage of stupid, or forgetful, or illiterate persons in it. If letters are badly or imperfectly addressed, it is the business of the Post Office to exhaust its resources in discovering their destination, and forwarding them with the least possible delay. So, also, if letters are mailed unpaid, thereby violating a Post Office rule, and entailing expense and inconvenience on the service, it is fair that it should levy a reciprocal compensation therefor in the shape of an extra charge; this is the rule of the European Post Offices, and works perfectly well. Our Post Office, with machinery much less perfect, instead of offering to deliver it, and see whether the person to whom it is addressed will not pay the penalty, sends it to Washington, and leaves the writer for an indefinite length of time in ignorance of his mistake. The inconvenience and injury and pain worked by this in the course of the year are very great. It may be said that if unpaid letters were forwarded a large number would be mailed for persons who would refuse to receive them, and the Post Office would then be a heavy loser. But the number of persons who take the trouble of sending letters or even circulars (though a discrimination might be made against these) to persons not likely to receive them, is, after all, small, and, in any case, in the organization of the Post Office everything should be made to give way to the bona fide correspondent, who has been guilty simply of an oversight. Better ten guilty men should escape than one innocent man suffer,—is as good a rule here as in Criminal Law.

However, this is a small matter compared to that touched on by another suggestion of the Convention, or Conference, or whatever it may be called, and that is, that letter carriers should not be dismissed except after a fair trial and for neglect of duty or dishonesty. If the carrier system is to be maintained, and it is acknowledged that it ought to be, the adoption of this rule is absolutely necessary to its efficiency. The recommendation of it by the leading members of the service shows that the idea that reform is necessary in the civil service is making headway in the civil service itself, and that it is ceasing to be an offence against party discipline to mention it.

It is quite obvious, however, that if preminence in office, and increase of salary in proportion to length of service, be necessary to secure efficiency among the carriers, it cannot be unnecessary among the clerks and other employes. The carriers play a very important part, doubtless, in getting letters to their destination, but so do the sorters, and mail agents, and special agents, and Postmasters themselves. There is no department of the public service the duties of which are more minute, and onerous, and require greater fidelity and honesty, than the Post Office. There is none on whose proper management the public is more dependent for its comforts, and the proper and punctual discharge of business. If it were handed over to-morrow to an express company, as some people propose, the President of the company would be thought actually mad, or wildly unprincipled, if he attempted to conduct it on the plan on which it is now conducted. The directors would depose him in a week, if they heard that he turned out most of his subordinates every four years, or even less; that he selected them from amongst an unsuccessful and not very respectable class; and that in appointing them, he asked them simply for whom they had voted at the last election, what were their views with regard to the Fifteenth Amendment, and had made no inquiries whatever with regard to their moral character and experience in the business. Suppose it were to transpire that the business of WELLS, FARGO & Co., which does transact a large Post Office business in California, is conducted in this manner, where would the stock be?

It is true the Post Office is not liable to the public in damages for loss or delay in the delivery of articles committed to its care as common carriers are, but this to an honest Government, instead of making it more careless in the discharge of its duties, would make it more careful and painstaking. The very fact that a poor man has no remedy if it loses his registered letter, ought to make it take double precautions to insure its safety; and the fact that the public is practically prevented by law, as well as by the nature of the case, from resorting to any other medium for the transmission of its correspondence, the maintenance of the ties between scattered friends, and the conduct of its business operations, ought to bind the Post Office in the most solemn way, not only to do all that a private firm would do in the management of a similar undertaking, but even to take pains which a private firm would never think of taking, and might be reasonably excused from taking.

The Condition of England.

People who are in the habit of reading the English newspapers cannot help noticing in them one remarkable characteristic, which is constantly becoming more and more prominent. We may describe it in a few words as a lack of patriotism. The public writers of that country seem to be of one mind in believing that England's brightest days are past, and that henceforth her decline must be not only certain but rapid. Probably a foreign war would once more kindle in the minds of the people something of the old enthusiasm. But the struggle for bread, the pressure of poverty, the difficulty of getting on, the hopeless prospect which lies before the vast majority of poor men in England, the immense burdens imposed upon all classes, have almost extinguished the love of country. Patriotism, if not dead, is in a deep lethargy. It is quite natural, under these circumstances, that England should be declining in influence and power.

Among the observant Englishmen who have thought over this phenomenon is Mr. FROUDE, the historian. He has written a long article in Fraser's Magazine for the purpose of calling the attention of his countrymen to a state of feeling which would be fatal to the progress of any country in the world. Like a practical man, however, he does not dwell upon the disease so much as upon the remedy. He has, it is true, nothing new to suggest. We gave yesterday an account of a meeting which had taken place in London for the purpose of organizing emigration societies on a large scale. But if men who leave England for distant shores change their nationality after a few years, of what practical advantage is the movement to the mother country? Mr. FROUDE and others meet this suggestion by recommending the English colonies, especially Australia and New-Zealand, as the fields of emigration. But then England has estranged all her colonies. She has told them, in effect, that she will have no more to do with them than she can help. Mr. FROUDE warns the Government and people that this policy must be reversed. There must be a "united Empire," and it can only be formed by the mother country approaching her offshoots in a more cordial spirit. "Fiectere si nequeo superos, Acheronta movebo," says Mr. FROUDE—if Mr. GLADSTONE will not do the work Mr. DISRAELI must. We hope Mr. DISRAELI will be flattered by the application of VIRGIL's line.

We have given this account of the discussion because it is a very striking sign of the times, and because it is probably destined to occupy a very prominent place in the future history of England. Is it too much to liken what is now going on in England to the struggles of a strong man who feels himself attacked by a mortal disease? Sir GEORGE GREY, himself an ex-colonial Governor, said at a public meeting in London the other day, "a vast and unusual amount of distress prevails in this country, affecting not only the poorest classes, but the classes above them as well, involving all together in a common calamity." Can we wonder that it is so? Excessive taxation has produced those results which inevitably follow it. Incubus after incubus weighs upon the heart of the country, and there is no hope of relief. Think of the Princes and Princesses, their wives and husbands, their children, their friends, their dependents, who draw large salaries or pensions at this moment! Where does the money come from? Where, but from the labor and toil of the working classes, who for years past have been finding it more and more difficult to keep the wolf from their own doors, while the occupants of palaces reveled on their hard earnings?

Mr. FROUDE may say to the victims of this huge extravagance, "go to Australia;" but why should they go to the antipodes when only three thousand miles away they can find a land where every man who is willing to work is sure to find a living? True, we are not without taxation. One effect of excessive imposts would surely be to deter emigrants from coming hither, but the burden will not be sustained long enough to affect us injuriously. Congress will lower the taxes, and we know that they are certain to melt away by degrees. There is no such hope in England. The pensioners on the country do not diminish. Every Prince who gets married must have a large allowance and a salary; so must his wife, and so must his children. If we could present a full statement of the charges upon the English people from this source alone, it would startle our readers. The English Government purposely keeps those figures as much out of sight as possible, but it cannot hide the fact that they are a terrible drain upon the resources of the country. England will flourish no more until her whole machinery of Government, priestly and ornamental, and the means by which it is sustained, has been greatly reduced in cost. "Emigrate," says Mr. FROUDE: Yes—the people are doing that as fast as they can now. But if they have any choice in the matter, they will come to the United States rather than go to the antipodes—much rather than to Canada. Has not that been the case for years past? What advantages are there in Australia that cannot be enjoyed here? The working classes of Great Britain have learned to look upon America as their home whenever they emigrate. It was easy to foresee that the governing class would become alarmed at the symptom some day or other. But it is beyond their power to change the current of feeling. Between royal and aristocratic pensioners and dependents, and a studied neglect of the laboring classes, the ancient inheritance of England has been well nigh thrown away. Can Mr. FROUDE show his countrymen how to repair that mischief? If so, he will better deserve a statue than all the Princes of the House of HANOVER.

Homes for Our Soldiers.

We briefly noted yesterday the praiseworthy move of the Commissioners of Public Charities, whereby the east wing of the Incurable Asylum of Ward's Island has been made a permanent home for soldiers who, by reason of wounds and infirmities, have become inmates of various hospitals and almshouses in and around the City. It is a matter of public congratulation that this step—laudable alike on patriotic and on charitable grounds—has been taken; but the question comes up, what the true system of charity is for our poverty-stricken defender, our maimed veterans who wander through the streets of great cities showing the crutch or the empty blue coat-sleeve,—badges of our American nobility. Shall we open for them local homes in every great city of the land like this of Ward's Island? Or shall we gather them into great "homes" under national auspices, like those at Dayton, Milwaukee and Augusta? Or, again, shall we encourage them to seek their bread at the street corners, as so many do, reaping so small sums from the charity of the passers-by?

We already have the "National Asylum" for disabled volunteer soldiers—a most excellent and flourishing institution—supported in good part by the pay struck off the accounts of deserters and others by sentence of court martial, and thus making the bad soldiers support the good. This great institution, with its central asylum in Ohio, its eastern in Maine, and its western in Wisconsin, has already been of great service to our crippled volunteers. Congress, by the legislation already spoken of, and also by a provision for furnishing some extra supplies from the commissary stores at a very low price, has firmly established it. Private benevolence has helped the scheme—as, for one example, in the magnificent gift of $100,000 by the ladies of Milwaukee to found the branch in that city. Perhaps the day will come when this great and benevolent institution will do all that is required for our brave volunteers, since their number dwindles fast as time wears down frames already exhausted by hard field service. Meanwhile, however, the asylum has actually to go out into the highways and byways, like the stewards at the marriage-feast, and "compel them to come in." Ex-soldiers, poor and proud, are besought to remember that this is "a home, not a charity," and even with this kindly suggestion the vacant places are but slowly taken.

The soldier shrinks with a natural reluctance from billeting himself in any institution, call it by what name you will. The same thing was noted in Greenwich, where after years of beneficence and the expenditure of millions of money, until the very name of the Hospital became a synonym of grateful and patriotic recognition of service in the country's cause, it was lately found desirable to dismantle the great institution, to diminish its corporate or collective character, and to rely chiefly on its facilities for distributing annuities to out-pensioners, or people living beyond the bounds of the buildings. Here, then, we get another great principle to guide us in this matter—not only, in the first place, to make these retreats for maimed veterans as much like homes and as little like almshouses as possible, but, also, in the second place, to leave the destitute soldiers, whenever practicable, among their own friends, entering them on the charitable lists, and dispensing the national or civic bounty to them at their own firesides.

After all this, however, by far the largest class remain unreached. These are the ex-soldiers who, through some distress of fortune, and perhaps quite unfitted for peace by long service in the field, or destitute of home and friends, are not even in the way of admittance to the national asylums. These poor fellows, utterly wrecked and helpless, find their way to the various pauper asylums of great cities, and above all of New-York. They are not the spruce and martial young fellows whose very appearance invites confidence and a helping hand; they are the battered, broken-down hulks of war, who have brought out of the long campaigns chiefly its residue of misfortunes. We praise the Ward's Island movement because of its abundant charity to this class, whose wounds plead for them through the rags that may cover them. The Commissioners ordered, last November, that the volunteer soldiers, inmates of the various hospitals and infirmaries under their charge, who had been honorably mustered out by reason of wounds received or disease contracted in the line of duty, should "be provided with comfortable clothing, different from that of inmates of the Almshouse, and that their diet be the same as that of the inmates of the Incurable Hospital." To this generous provision has now been added new quarters, where, in their army clothing, and with friendly association, the ex-soldiers may know that honorable service for the Union will not go wholly unrewarded.

The Senate has decided not to be magnanimous. It has denied Virginia the unconditional admission to which liberal and undeserved clemency with the Reconstruction acts entitle it, and which the House generously conceded. At the same time the Senate has refused to be malignant. It has changed the phraseology of the preamble to the House bill without changing its substance, and has added certain provisos, the more important of which will come to be necessary after the complete ratification of the Fifteenth Amendment, and all of which are material only in connection with certain contingencies that are not likely to happen. The wrong done Virginia is the delay in the recognition of its lawful claims, aggravated by the impertinence cast upon the good faith of its local Government and the great body of its citizens. Remembering, however, how much worse the whole affair would have been had the extremists carried their point, perhaps we should congratulate the State upon the apparent prospect of final deliverance from a torture as humiliating as it has been painful. The test of loyalty and of the wisdom of the Reconstruction measures remains to be endured, and there is no telling, at this moment, how that may end. We can but hope that the good sense and good feeling which actuated Mr. DRAKE and his colleagues and rendered them for the time successful, will prevent further mischief by accepting the bill as it now stands.

Our anticipations regarding the political forces involved in the ironworkers' strike at Cleveland have been speedily and unfortunately justified. The revolutionary menace referred to by the telegraph must be simply understood to mean the Continental type of trades union extension, who are usually men that associate ideas of political regeneration with the assertion of the grievances of labor. In the present instance the men appear to have been ripe for revolt, the occasion of a change in the direction taken by their being altogether too slight a cause for a Communistic revolutionist. The manifestations of sympathy which it so promptly communicated by great industrial movements like the present, is expected to lead to an extension of the area of the strike. It is to be hoped that the presence of the troops, who have been dispatched for the maintenance of order, will not aggravate a state of things already sufficiently dangerous.

The time predicted by BISMARCK when the great men of France should be immortalized seems likely to be inaugurated under the Ollivier regime. Without reference to the irrepressible publicists who have lately had "great men thrust upon them," we find that M. HENRY, of the Journal de Paris, is spoken of for the Prefecture of Marseilles, the well-known M. ANCEY for that of Bordeaux, and that a Ministerial Secretaryship is to be offered to M. WEISS. Place for the young and capable is said to be the motto of the new Administration.

We doubt whether land has increased so rapidly in value in any city in the world as it has done in New-York. As was stated yesterday in our reports, it is not an uncommon thing for the same property to be sold at an advance of 50 to 100 per cent. within a year of its purchase. Twenty years ago lots on Fifth-avenue could be bought for $200 each, which would now readily fetch $20,000 in the market. Lots which then sold for $250 will now bring from $10,000 to $12,000. This upward movement is still going on, although panics and scarcity of money may every now and then momentarily check it. The island of Manhattan has its limits, like other islands, and people will live and do business in New-York if they can. It is almost impossible that the island can ever be "over-built," and consequently there is not much chance of real estate falling to a discount.

In reference to the amount of money which can be earned by hard-working girls, we find a few interesting facts mentioned in the Boston Traveller. That journal very properly advocates the plan of paying females at the same rate of wages, for the same work, and it has carried its theories into practice—which is more than can be said for a good many advocates of "woman's rights." It has employed girls in the printing office, as compositors, and states that the "result has been most satisfactory." The girls have been paid "by the piece," the same as the men, and we find that the wages of one of them, as given by our contemporary for seven weeks past, averages $15 per week. Another earned from $12 to $16 per week, and none of them seemed to have made less than $12. This is certainly a great contrast to the returns given by the Star on Monday, but all girls who have to earn their living cannot be compositors. Something, however, might be done to direct them to the most profitable sources of employment.

One would think the revolutionary genius of the age, finding too much quietude and too few opportunities of exercise in France, has gone up to break new ground in Russia. There are reports of conspiracies in St. Petersburg, Moscow and Odessa; but it is not easy to understand what the Slavonical mind would be at. It is evident that there is a "Young Russia," and that the collegians of those cities are looking out for what RENAN used to call "the good time." No doubt the grand break-up of the serf system, together with the recent examples of the other European monarchies—the Austrian especially—has disturbed the philosophy of the Russians. It is stated that they want to kill the Czar—which is not very likely, seeing that ALEXANDER is no Tiberius. They want some sort of reform, and this they will probably have in the natural order of things.

Amusements and Announcements.

The representation by which M. PAUL JULIEN is to benefit occurs at the Theatre Francais this night....Miss JOHANNA SIMONSEN, a lady of musical promise, is to profit by a concert at Apollo Hall this evening. A very excellent programme has been prepared, and will be interpreted by Miss SIMONSEN and Mr. HENRY C. TIMM, her instructor, and by Miss E. V. HUTCHINGS, Mr. F. REMENYI, Mr. J. INWERNEGK, and Mr. P. I. KERN's orchestra....At the matinée of the Young Men's Christian Association to-day, Miss LANDMANN and Mr. RANDOLF will sing, and instrumental performances will be given by Messrs. LEVY, MORA and MORGAN....A matinée of "OTTO" will be a special attraction at Wallack's Theatre.

THE CUBAN RELIEF CONCERT.

Lest any of our readers should be misguided by the omission of the date in the announced postponement, we beg to state that the concert for the relief of the Cubans, in which Mme. VARONA and other ladies are interested, and which is to be under the direction of Mme. ALBITEZ, is to take place on the evening of Saturday, the 30th inst.

THE PHILHARMONIC SOCIETY.

At the seventh rehearsal of the Philharmonic Society yesterday afternoon, the following was the programme:

Symphony in F, Waltz for Flute (instruction of Signor Sedlitz) ..... BEETHOVEN
Overture, "Semiramis," (first time in America) ..... GOLDMARK
Overture, "Leonora," No. 2 ..... BEETHOVEN

The symphony has five movements. Of the overture to Semiramis, it was so unevenly considered that it is impossible to judge of its merits. Miss KELLOGG and Miss ADA MERRITT are to assist at the next concert.

PLYMOUTH CHURCH.

Mr. JOHN P. MORGAN, assisted by Messrs. E. H. MARKS and F. E. PERKINS, organists, and Mr. CHARLES WARREN, violinist, will play at the usual concert at Plymouth Church, Brooklyn, to-day, at 4 o'clock.

Chief Justice Chase and the Fifteenth Amendment.

While the resolution to ratify the proposed Fifteenth Amendment was under discussion in the Ohio House of Representatives on Wednesday evening, the following letter from Chief Justice CHASE was read:

WASHINGTON, November, 1868.

Hon. Thomas Jennings:

MY DEAR SIR: The vote of the whole country was upon the State of Ohio. On your vote depends the passage of the Fifteenth Amendment. I am for universal suffrage and universal manhood. The amendment must be passed by this Legislature at all hazards. S. P. CHASE.

The original letter had a postscript of two lines, which was not read, and which the reporters were not permitted to copy, no reason being given whether it related to the Amendment or not.

The twenty dollars received from H. C. shall be applied to the purpose indicated.

CHARLES DICKENS.

The Novelist at the Birmingham and Midland Institute—A Speech and an Explanation on an Startled Remark.

Mr. CHARLES DICKENS, the President of the Birmingham and Midland Institute, on the evening of Jan. 6, distributed the prizes and certificates awarded to the most successful students in the past year. This proceeding was held in the Town Hall, which was filled with an assemblage of ladies and gentlemen. Mr. DICKENS entered the hall at 8 o'clock, and was received with much applause. After the lapse of a minute or two, Mr. DICKENS rose and said:

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN: When I last had the honor to preside over a meeting of the institution which again brings me together, I took occasion to remark upon a certain superabundance of public speaking which seems to me to distinguish the present time. It will require very little self-denial on my part to refrain to-night to practice upon that I preached then. Firstly, because I said my instincts that night and secondly, because we have definite and highly interesting action before us this evening. We have now to bestow the rewards which have been brilliantly won by the most successful competitors in the society's lists. I say the most successful because to-night we should particularly observe, I think, that there is success in all honest endeavor, and that there is some victory gained in every gallant struggle that is made. To serve to all involves a victory achieved over sloth, perverse, and indifference, and competition for these prizes involves besides, in the vast majority of cases, competition with and mastery asserted over those circumstances adverse to the trade; therefore, every loading success may be success may be certain that is still has won much, very much, and that he can well afford to smile the triumph of the rival who has opposed him in the race. I have applied the word reward to these prizes, and I do so, not because they represent great intrinsic worth in silver or gold, but precisely because they do not. They represent what is above all price: what can be stated in no arithmetical figures, and what is one of the great needs of the human soul—encouraging sympathy. They are the recognition to every student that there is room for some in your institution that has done not work either neglected or unfriended, and that he is watched, felt for, stimulated and appreciated—such an assurance conveyed in the presence of this large assembly and striking to the breasts of the recipient that thrill which is inseparable from the great intellectual distance. A feeling—as a reward—is my thinking, as purely worthy of the labor as the labor itself is worthy of the reward, and by a sensitive spirit can never be forgotten. Mr. DICKENS then proceeded to deliver the prizes, and in doing so shook each student warmly by the hand and accompanied each proceeding with appropriate and genial remark. He warmly complimented a young man named CAPWELL, who obtained the chemical prize, the Evans prize of £20, and in consideration of which, (Mr. DICKENS said,) that account of his standing as an apprentice and as an analytical chemist at Messrs. CRANCE's famous works. In presenting a certificate to a young lady named "Winkle," Mr. DICKENS announced, amid shouts of laughter, that he had recommended the fair student to "change her name" after the distribution of the prizes. Mr. Dickens concluded by a reference to his political creed, said: "When I was here last Autumn I made, in reference to some remarks of your respected member, Mr. DIXON, a short confession of my political faith, or, perhaps, I should better say, want of faith. I imported that I have very little confidence in the people who governed—I mean by the word "people" there will be with a small "p"—but that I have great confidence in the people whom they governed—please to observe people there with a large "P." This was shortly and elliptically stated, and was, in no evil intention I am absolute sure, misunderstood, or, at least, erroneously explained. Forgive me the invention of a certain extravagant fiction, but one which I do say was rather frequently quoted as if there were grains of truth at the bottom of it—a fiction called the "Circumlocution Office;" and perhaps, also, as the writer of an idle book or two whose public opinions I cannot altogether disregard, perhaps in these respects I did not sufficiently bear in mind Hamlet's caution to "speak by the card, lest equivocation should undo" me. Now I complain of nobody; but simply in order that there may be no mistake as to what I did mean and as to what I do mean, I will restate my meaning, and I will do so in the words of a great thinker and writer, and great scholar—whom death unfortunately cut short—in his History of Civilization in India: "They may talk as they will about reforms which Government have introduced and improvements to be effected from legislation, and they may talk and they will talk; but the commanding view of human affairs will soon discover that such hopes are chimerical—they will learn that lawgivers are nearly always but obstructors of society, instead of its helpers, and that in extremely few cases only will their measures turn out well. Their success has been owing to the fact that, contrary to the usual tenor of their kind, they have obeyed the spirit of their time, and they have been, as they always should be, the more servants of the people, to whose wishes they are bound to give a public and legal sanction." On the motion of Mr. GANEBY, the senior Vice-President, a vote of thanks was passed to Mr. DICKENS by acclamation.

EGYPT.

Important Changes in the Judicial System.

Letters from Egypt mention that the Conference of Commissioners of the various foreign Powers to consider the proposed changes in the judicial system of the country, so far as they may affect foreigners, had commenced its labors. It has lately been joined by Mr. HALE, Consul-General of the United States, under a full power from President GRANT, and now consists of representatives from Austria, France, Great Britain, Italy, North German Union, Russia and the United States, and of NUBAR PASHA, Minister of Foreign Affairs of Egypt.

FRANCE.

The Removal of Baron Haussmann from Office—Correspondence Between Him and the Emperor.

From Le Figaro, Jan. 8.

On Monday, Jan. 3, after the formality of taking the oaths had been fulfilled by the new Ministers, the Emperor spoke in these terms:

GENTLEMEN: The first question which the Council will have to examine, and afterwards to solve, is that relating to the situation of the City of Paris. The present Prefect, Baron HAUSSMANN, has found himself driven, in consequence of the adoption of the bill for the loan of the Credit Foncier, to certain expressions of a dilatory, onerous, and compromising nature. The Baron, who has already on two occasions in the course of 1869 offered me his resignation, now requests to be allowed to retire. I, in the interests of the Municipal Council for the examination of his accounts, and to prepare to the end the responsibility of his acts. It appears to me urgent to come to a decision on this proposition; and, in any case a conference in which the Prefect of the Seine could be heard might be of service in throwing light on the subject. The Council, after having respectfully listened to the Sovereign, took the liberty of differing in opinion, and decided, in the same sitting, that Baron HAUSSMANN should be replaced without delay. An autograph letter from NAPOLEON III. reached the Baron shortly after his breakfast, and informed him of the sudden determination taken respecting him. The communication ended with cordial assurances of gratitude and affection for the services which he had rendered. This consolatory epistle was entirely in his Majesty's handwriting. The Baron, after reading the document, sent notice to the chief clerks and to his own family, gave orders for preparations of departure, and then took up the pen in his turn to reply. After reminding His Majesty that the Prefect of Paris was a mere nobody who could be treated with slight, he added: "I refuse to give in my resignation. I do not know why, but I wished to elude the difficulties of the last hour. I am resolved to give in my accounts regularly, liquidate the debt of the city, and quit my situation, but the great gate in delivering up my portfolio to my successor in a sound state. I wish to meet the full responsibility of all that I have done; and for that reason I demand to be heard before a decision is come to, the consequence of which I leave at the door of those who have so lightly adopted it. In consequence I request Your Majesty to prevent persons from inserting my name in the Journal Official with the ordinary formalities even from stating that I have sent in a claim for a retiring pension. I am determined to be discharged from my functions." In other words Baron HAUSSMANN, who is at present the Prefect of longest standing in France, demands his revocation.

SPAIN.

Olozaga Recovered by Napoleon.

Writing from Madrid, under date of Jan. 5, our correspondent says: "Before Señor OLOZAGA left Paris for Madrid, he was summoned to the Tuileries. The Emperor spoke to him in broken sense, saying that the existing Ministry in Spain was disgraceful in the eyes of Europe. He added that Portugal was continually that socialist and communist theories were being preached in Spain, and that France had a right to make the same complaints. His Majesty said that up to the present moment he had not interfered

ALBANY.

AN Absent A Stenographer—The Senate Still Awaits—The Governor's Nominations—Free Salt, Coal and Iron—A Member Arrested—A New Commissioner—The Awards Railway, &c.

From Our Own Correspondent.

ALBANY, Friday, Jan. 21, 1870.

The Senate busied itself for a half hour or more, at the opening of the session this morning, in the discussion of a resolution to appoint a stenographer. In the general scramble for offices, large and small, that distinguishes and disgraces the Democratic majority of this Legislature, the position of stenographer, heretofore regarded as non-political, is entered as one of the prizes. Three or four different Senators urged their respective candidates, and the discussion showing signs of bitterness, a motion was made and carried to lay the whole subject on the table. Senator MURPHY took the sensible ground that no stenographer was necessary, and Senator CRAMER took the liberal ground that if the office was to be continued the appointment should not be made on political considerations, reminding his brother Democrats that last year, when the Republicans had a majority in the Senate, they elected a Democratic stenographer.

PROGRESS OF THE EXCISE BILL.

The Senate went into Committee of the Whole twice on the Assembly bill, extending the time for demanding liquor licenses, and after a lively debate finally succeeded in ordering it to a third reading.

THE GOVERNOR'S NOMINATIONS.

It was decided at a caucus of Democratic Senators held last evening, to confirm four or five of the Governor's nominees, and it was expected that an Executive session would have been held to-day for that purpose, but several of the fractious Senators did not attend the caucus, and for fear there would be a bolt from the programme agreed on, the Governor's friends did not dare to have an Executive Session, and so soon as the routine business was transacted moved an adjournment till Monday, which was carried.

Unless certain Democratic Senators act different from what they talk now, there are several of the Governor's nominees who will never get confirmed.

FREE TRADE IN SALT, COAL AND RAILROAD IRON.

The Select Committee, consisting of Messrs. LETTERJOHN, ALVORD, JACOBS and W. D. MURPHY, appointed to consider the various resolutions offered instructing our Senators and Representatives in Congress to use their influence to procure a repeal of the duties on certain necessaries, made a majority report in which they recommend the repeal of all the duties on salt, coal and railroad iron, and a liberal reduction of the duty on pig iron. Mr. ALVORD presented an elaborate minority report, containing an exhaustive essay on the whole subject of protection to American industry, declaring it to be a Democratic doctrine, and essential to the prosperity of the industrial classes of this country. On motion, the two reports were ordered printed, and made the special order for Tuesday evening next.

INVASION OF THE PRIVILEGES OF MEMBERS.

HENRY RAY, member from Ontario, was arrested early this morning and taken to Troy as a witness in a civil suit, he having refused to obey a summons served on him yesterday. Messrs. FIELDS, ALVORD and LETTERJOHN and others claimed that this was a violation of the privileges of members, secured to them by the Constitution, and the Committee on Grievances was directed to inquire into and report the facts to the House.

IMPROVEMENT OF THE WATER FRONT.

The Democracy have suddenly taken a great fancy for "Commissions." Instead of abolishing those created by Republican Legislatures, as they threatened to do, they are every day proposing new ones. Mr. KIERNAN to-day introduced a bill containing a magnificent and comprehensive scheme for the improvement of the water front of New-York City. It provides for the appointment by the Mayor of five Commissioners of Wharves and Piers, who shall have exclusive control of all wharf property belonging to the City, and superintend the building and repairing of the same, subject only to a revisory check from the Commissioners of the Sinking Fund. After the organization of the Board they are directed from time to time to hold meetings for hearing suggestions relating to the improvement of the water front of the City, and to advertise for the best plans. They are required to determine on some plan before November, 1870, which shall be referred to the Commissioners of the Sinking Fund for their approval, who may adopt or reject it. If the latter, another plan is to be submitted to them, and as soon as a plan is agreed upon the Board shall proceed to lay out and construct wharves, piers, bulkheads, basins, slips, &c., in accordance therewith—the work to be done by contract with the lowest bidder, after due advertising for proposals. When the new wharves, piers, &c., are constructed, the Board is authorized to regulate the charges for wharfage, and may, if it chooses, lease wharves for a term of years not exceeding ten. The TIMES and other papers have often urged the necessity of some liberal and comprehensive plan for improving the water front of the Metropolis, and here it is. If the Commission proposed were to be a non-partisan Board, and the right kind of men were appointed by the Mayor, it might result in great good to the City, but if, as is suspected, it is only a colossal scheme to add to the power and increase the patronage of the Tammany Ring, then it had better never become a law. Whether it should turn out to be the one or the other would depend entirely on Mayor HALL.

THE ARCADE RAILROAD.

MELVILLE SMITH, the enthusiastic champion of the Arcade Railroad scheme, made his appearance here to-day, and is said to be the furnisher of a bill for his pet project, which is to be entered next week. The plan of an underground railroad, which, at first, was deemed by many to be visionary, appears to have gradually increased in the confidence of the public and of capitalists, until it now has more backers among wealthy and prominent citizens than any other project for an underground railroad ever brought to the public notice. It is said that a very powerful company has been organized in New-York, composed of men whose wealth and standing cannot fail to insure success to any enterprise they may undertake. The "arcade" plan is a favorite with nearly all the members of the Legislature, and the bill will pass without difficulty. The only New-York street railroad bills now before the Legislature are an elevated, underground and surface road from the City Hall to Fort Washington, the Ninth-street Railroad, which was favorably reported in the Senate to-day, and the old bill of the Manhattan Company for a transit road under Broadway.

MARTIN THE TRANSLATOR.

By the last mail Mr. BENSTANG has received a variety of the latest English papers, some of them possessing unusual attractions. The Graphic, &c., surpasses all former numbers, and as a work of art does the highest credit to its publishers. It will doubtless supply "food" for illustrated papers some hours for a week or two to come. The fine engravings "Frozen In," "A Pantomime at Drury Lane," "Football at Rugby," "Goose" and "Easiest Refuge Boys in New-York" are especially worthy the notice of all our readers. Mr. BENSTANG has also received the Academy, Punch, Nature, the Illustrated London News and Saturday Review.

NEW AND CONVENIENT.

THE PHILOSOPHY OF DR. SCHENCK'S GREAT MEDICINES—We point novel ideas to every man of thought, live and reason with scientific minds the entire system. The pulmonary complaints of consumption, bronchitis, and pleurisy are diseases of the difficult type, and continue in a cure the which almost invariably follows their prolongation, to the grave. Living, on the majority of people do, is a complete torture, with the layer of poison, as you will be aware, in all that, sooner or later, nature will revenge herself. Hence we find that persons who indulge to excess in the use of very rich or indigestible food or intoxicating drinks, invariably pay a heavy penalty in the end. The stomach becomes disordered, and refuses to act; the liver fails to perform its functions; dyspepsia and its attendant evils follow, and still the suffering individual persists in clinging to the thoroughly exploded idea of the past. Dr. SCHENCK'S medicines are recommended to all sick. They bring cure and certain relief wherever they are used to excess, and all that is necessary is to establish their reputation in every living man or woman in the land is to use one important trial of them. Let those who are doubtful on this point, and who have prejudiced themselves against these new discoveries for Consumption, discard their prejudices, and be governed by the principles of reason and common sense. If the system is disordered, depend upon it, in nine cases out of ten the cause of the disorder will be found in the stomach and liver. The stomach and invigorate the stomach, and by stimulate the liver to healthy action; use

SCHENCK'S MANDRAKE PILLS—the daily increasing demand for these pills is the best evidence of their value. Thousands upon thousands of boxes are sold daily. Why? Simply because they act promptly and effectually. Invalids who suppose that it is convenient to call on Dr. SCHENCK in person are informed that full and complete directions for use accompany each package of the MANDRAKE PILLS, PULMONIC SYRUP and SEAWEED TONIC.—These medicines will cure Consumption, unless the lungs have so far gone that the patient is entirely beyond the reach of medical relief.

It may be asked, by those who are not familiar with the virtues of these great remedies, How do Dr. SCHENCK'S medicines cure this fatal disease of Consumption?

The process is simple enough. They begin their work of restoration by invigorating the stomach, liver and bowels into an active, healthy condition. It is food that cures the pulmonary disease. SCHENCK'S MANDRAKE PILLS act on the liver and stomach, promoting healthy secretion, and ridding the bile and slime which have resulted from the inactive or torpid condition of these organs and of the system generally. This sluggish state of the body and the consequent accumulation of the unhealthy substances named, prevents the proper digestion of food, and as a natural consequence creates disease, which results in prostration and finally in death.

SCHENCK'S PULMONIC SYRUP and SEAWEED TONIC, when taken regularly mingle with the food, aid the digestive organs, make good, rich blood, and, as a natural consequence, give flesh and strength to the patient. Let the faculty say what it may, this is the only true cure for Consumption. Experience has proved it beyond the shadow of a doubt, and thousands are to-day alive and well who a few years ago were regarded as hopeless cases, but who were induced to try Dr. SCHENCK'S remedies, and were restored to permanent health by their use.

One of the first steps the physician should take with a consumptive patient is to invigorate the system. Now, how is this to be done? Certainly not by giving medicines that exhaust and excite—medicines that impair instead of improve the functions of the digestive organs. Dr. SCHENCK'S medicines cleanse the stomach and bowels and other medicines which are calculated to irritate or weaken them. They cause an appetite—promote healthful digestion—make good blood, and do a consequence they invigorate and strengthen the entire system, and more especially those parts which are diseased. If this cannot be done, then the case must be regarded as a hopeless one.

If the physician finds it impossible to make—A PATIENT FEEL STRONG; if the diseased person cannot partake of good nourishing food and properly digest it, it is impossible that he can gain in flesh and strength; and it is equally impossible to bring a patient to this condition so long as the lungs is honeycombed with diseased life, and the stomach laden with unhealthy slime.

Almost the first request made to the physician by a consumptive patient is that he will prescribe medicines that will remove or allay the cough, night sweats and chills, which are the sure attendants on Consumption. But this should not be done, as the cough is only an effort of nature to relieve itself, and the night sweats and chills are caused by the diseased lungs. The remedies commonly prescribed do more harm than good. They impair the functions of the stomach, impede healthy digestion, and aggravate rather than cure the disease.

There is, after all, nothing like facts with which to substantiate a position, and it is upon facts that Dr. SCHENCK relies. Nearly all the have taken his medicines in conjunction with Mandrake Pills have not only been cured of Consumption, but bear the fact that these medicines act, with wonderful power upon the digestive organs, and aids in the natural assimilation of food, thereby the system of all impurities, they lay the foundation for a solid, substantial structure. Restoring these organs to health, they create an appetite. The food is properly assimilated, the quantity of blood is not only increased, but is made rich and strong, and in the face of such a condition of the system all disease must be banished.

Full directions accompany each of the medicines, so that it is not absolutely necessary that patients should see Dr. SCHENCK personally, unless they desire to have their lungs examined. For this purpose he is at his principal office, No. 15 North-Street, corner of Commerce, Philadelphia, every saturday, from 9 A. M. until 3 P. M.

Advice is given without charge, but for a thorough examination with the Respirometer the charge is $5.

Price of the Pulmonic Syrup and Seaweed Tonic, each $1.50 per bottle, or $7.50 a half dozen. Mandrake Pills, 25 cents a box.

"Here, to begin with, is PUTNAM'S, at once fresh and solid, attractive and substantial. Probably the principal attraction of PUTNAM'S will for some time to come be the new novel, 'A WOMAN'S RIGHT,' by Mrs. MARY CLEMMER AMES. Here is, at last, something with pretensions to be a genuine American novel, many of the soil, and yet of such high, universal interest as to claim adoption into the general literature of the English language. * * * The 'woman's right' which gives a title to the story is not the right to vote, or is very partisan; for Mrs. Ames does not seem to have any intention of weighing her story with political or social controversy. There are many other good things in the number of PUTNAM—which, indeed, is one of the best magazine numbers we have read for a long time.—New-York Independent.

LOCAL NEWS IN BRIEF.

NEW-YORK CITY.

The members of Atlas Lodge No. 263, F. & A. M., met at their rooms in Irvin Building, corner Bowery and Houston-street, on Thursday evening, and presented to one of their Past Masters — R. W. JOHN BOYD — a very costly jewel as a token of affectionate regard. The dowers were represented in a fitting speech by P. S. G. W. WM. T. WOODRUFF, and the response by the recipient was of the most grateful character. After the presentation a bountiful collation was enjoyed by the company, and several happy addresses were spoken by Grand Officers and others present. In the course of these remarks creditable mention was made of the talented Mr. ROBERT EWING, who was first most in perfecting the plan of the affair as designed by his brethren.

None of the letter carriers of this City were present at the Washington Convention, but were represented there by an agent. It appears that there has been some trouble in regard to the payment of salaries. The present regulation is that a carrier is to get $50 for the first six months, $60 for the next, and $1,000 after a year's service. In several cases the advance to $1000 has not been made by the authorities, which has occasioned complaint. The trouble lies at Washington.

The next lecture in the free course of scientific lectures for the people, at the Cooper Union, will take place in the great hall, this evening. Subject — "Birds; their Structure and Natural History," by Professor A. J. SMITH.

Miss KATE FIELD will lecture this evening at Irving Hall, in aid of the fund for disabled soldiers and sailors. Her subject is "Among the Adirondacks," being a lively and sprightly description of that sportsman's paradise. She also gives some incidents in the life of old JOHN BROWN not generally known. This is the third lecture of a most interesting course, which has opened a fund of $1,000 for the benefit of disabled soldiers and sailors. Post Full Kearney, of the Grand Army of the Republic, has undertaken the management of the course, and such names as those of General PLEASONTON, GRAHAM and THE MAYOR, together with those of other well-known men, have found interesting the schools. The subject is a novelty one, and as Miss FIELD is as popular in the lecture room as she is as a writer, the hall will doubtless be crowded this evening.

Rev. ISRAEL S. DENNI, late United States Consul at Java and United States Commissioner to Asia, will give pictorial illustrations, or "Walks and Talks in Bible Lands," in the Greenpoint Presbyterian Church, this afternoon. This wonderful traveler and popular lecturer has spent the last fifteen years in visiting almost every place of interest and renown on both hemispheres.

A grand union temperance meeting will be held at Cooper Institute to-morrow evening at 7:30 o'clock, under the auspices of the Sons of Temperance. The audience will be addressed by Hon. HORACE GREELEY, who will preside; Rev. Dr. Ferry, Grand Worthy Patriarch of Sons of Temperance; Rev. T. T. KENDRICK; WM. H. BURLEIGH, who will read an original poem; and JOHN W. HUTCHINSON. Appropriate songs will be sung by the HUTCHINSON family.

Another revenue raid will be made on the lottery dealers very soon for non-payment of special tax, &c., in case they do not come forward and make an amicable settlement with the Government.

Dr. B. A. GOULD, of Cambridge, Mass., delivered the sixth scientific lecture before the American Institute, last evening, in the Grand Hall of Cooper Institute, on the "Constitution of the Sun." Among the diagrams exhibited by the lecturer was a photograph taken by Mr. RUTHERFORD, of this City, yesterday, showing very clearly the indentations on the sun's surface in the form of black spots, one of which, the doctor said, would swallow forty globes such as ours.

Professor DOREMUS delivered the third lecture of his course before the Young Men's Christian Association last evening. He spoke on the properties of light, illustrating the subject by numerous interesting experiments.

Mr. WILLIAM DOUGLASS, the owner of the yacht Sappho, has published a challenge to any schooner yacht in Great Britain or Ireland to sail a match from Cape Clear to Sandy Hook, in the month of July, 1870. He also expresses his willingness to enter a race from Nab Light to Cherbourg Breakwater and back in the first week of June.

One boy was killed and two others seriously injured by the fall of a pile of timber near which they were playing, in Newark, on Thursday evening. Mrs. KILLEN, the mother of the dead boy, is in destitute circumstances.

The officers and members of the Seventy-first Regiment gave their friends a reception last evening in their new Armory in Thirty-second-street, and had a regular house-warming over the event. The rooms are in excellent shape, and were filled to overflowing by a fashionable assemblage of ladies and gentlemen. Professor DOWNING and the regimental band afforded the company a select programme of promenade music.

The Charity Ball which is to take place at the Academy of Music on the 24 of February, will be a most brilliant affair, probably more so than on any previous year. The boxes are nearly all disposed of and tickets are selling rapidly. The supper arrangements have been placed in the hands of Mr. DELMONICO.

The monthly meeting of the Young Men's Christian Association will be held on Monday evening in the large hall. Rev. E. P. ROGERS, D. D., and others, will address the meeting, which will be open to the public.

In our report of the case of FRASER against FREEMAN, in the Supreme Court, published yesterday, the theory of the plaintiff was inadvertently put for the "substantial facts" of the matter. The defendant insists, as he has done throughout the entire proceedings, that the second and not he, (the defendant,) was the assailant, and that the killing was not effected by him (FREEMAN) or by any one else with his consent. FREEMAN avers further that he did not even know that MULLADY was in the place, or that he was armed with any weapon at any time.

"Reddy the Blacksmith" was discharged from custody yesterday, after paying about $75 as revenue tax, penalties and costs.

Ex-Commodore BENJAMIN F. BRADY and Major-General ALEXANDER SHALER were candidates at the annual meeting of the Hudson Amateur Rowing Association for the position of Commodore of the Association. Mr. BRADY was elected.

The Harlem Steamboat Company claims $8,000 damage done to their boat Sylvan Grove, which collided with one of the Thirty-fourth-street ferry boats during the heavy fog a few weeks ago.

The third annual ball of the Prince of Orange Lodge No. 339, was held last evening at the Everett Rooms, corner of Thirty-fourth-street and Broadway. The attendance was large, and the brethren of the Order appeared in full regalia.

Allemania Hall, No. 18 East Sixteenth-street, was crowded to its utmost capacity last evening by the members and guests of the Irving Saloon Union, assembled at their annual ball.

Coroner ROLLINS will hold an inquest today at No. 23 Orchard-street, over the remains of EMILE DOROTHEA BARCHFELDT, aged 2 years, whose death was due to burns accidentally sustained on Wednesday.

SAMUEL TAYLOR, of No. 47 Grand-street, was arrested yesterday, at the instance of BENJAMIN B. JEREMIAH, of No. 18 Water-street, on a charge of stealing a case of boots, valued at $50, from the store of Mr. JOHN FRANCIS, of No. 20 White-street. As the prisoner was detected in the act of committing the larceny, Justice DOWLING held him for trial.

A woman named AMBROSE visited the House of Refuge at Randall's Island yesterday, for the purpose of securing the release of her boy. While waiting in the Warden's office for the decision of her case, the woman suddenly expired from unknown cause. Coroner FLYNN will hold an inquest.

A young lad named CHARLES HAMMOND was found endeavoring to effect an entrance into the store of Mr. ARTHUR GEYER, No. 818 Broadway, on Thursday evening, with a jimmy. He was arraigned at the Jefferson Market Police Court yesterday, and was temporarily committed upon the charge in the absence of the officer. PATRICK FITZSIMONS was also charged with burglary, but the evidence adduced being insufficient to support the commitment, he was discharged.

MATILDA ANDERSON was held to answer at the Essex Market Police Court yesterday for stealing a watch, worth $25, from the person of JACOB LANG.

BROOKLYN.

Justice JAMES BUCKLEY, who was indicted by the Grand Jury on the charge of committing a ballot-box fraud at the last election, and who has made himself generally conspicuous and insolent to citizens generally of late, assaulted Mr. THOMAS CAVANAGH, Sexton, in East Brooklyn, at No. 9 Court-street, on Thursday night and was knocked down the stairs to the street by HUGH McLAUGHLIN.

Mr. JOHN P. MORGAN, of Trinity Church, New-York; Misses E. E. MAYER and F. E. PINKERTON, of New-Jersey, and Mr. CHAS. WEBBER, violoncellist to the Emperor of Brazil, constitute the galaxy of talent of the Plymouth organ concert this afternoon. The rumor that Prince ARTHUR was to be present is without foundation in fact.

Five hogsheads of ale, the property of H. KOHLER, brewer, in Third-avenue, were seized by the United States authorities yesterday for not having the proper stamps on them. They were handed over to the United States Marshal for safe keeping.

A fire broke out at the bakery of JAMES T. SHANNON, Third-avenue, near Sixteenth-street, yesterday morning, which communicated with the grocery of THOMAS McCORMICK and the dry store of S. C. BOYD, adjoining. The buildings were damaged to the amount of $1,600; insured. Mr. SHANNON's loss amounted to $1,000. Mr. McCORMICK's loss is $2,000, and Mr. BOYD's loss to $600; all covered by insurance.

The ship Rosalind Westbrook, for the ordnance dock at the Navy Yard, yesterday forenoon, cast her lines taken on board. She acted worthy of her name by smashing the guardrails on the floating bridge in places on her way. An order was received yesterday to have a crew in readiness for the Colorado. All seamen desirous of going on this vessel, and who have less than five years to serve, can have their discharge now, so as to enable them to rendezvous for the long voyage of the Colorado.

The Williamsburg ballot-box performers have lost their first enthusiasm, and have adjourned until the first Thursday in April next, unless called upon to meet sooner.

ROBERT PICKETT, a late employe of the Navy Yard, died at his residence, No. 112 Plymouth-street, on Thursday, from injuries sustained by an accident while at his work some time ago. His fellow workmen raised $100 for his benefit.

The house of Mr. CHARLES H. SMITH, of Hackensack, near Nonhand-avenue, was entered by burglars yesterday morning through the coal hole in the back yard. They took property valued at $60.

JULIUS RAYMOND, a distiller doing business at Newtown, L. I., was brought before Commissioner JONES yesterday, charged with having failed to pay the special tax. He was held in bail in $1,000.

BERLANDSON's greenhouse in First-street, near Greenpoint-avenue, took fire yesterday afternoon, and damage was sustained amounting to $100.

An alarm was spread the other day that Mrs. ISABELLA SCHILLING and her three sons, HARRY, WILLIE and GEORGE, and a Mrs. SEMPLE-DRAKE, their friend, residing in the vicinity of North Fifth and Fourth streets, Williamsburg, had eaten some Washington Market pork, and that they had been attacked with trichina. After much doctoring and trouble the case turned out to be one of inordinate feeding. The supposed victims had eaten too much pork for the SCHILLINGS.

Mr. WM. RICHARDSON, of the Atlantic-street Railroad, in making his internal revenue returns, reports his receipts for December last at $15,489 48.

The first of the course of Saturday afternoon concerts and readings at the rooms of the Young Men's Christian Association will take place this afternoon.

The number of patients treated gratuitously at the Eclectic Dispensary in December was 1,120; the prescriptions dispensed, 2,800; and the visits made, 68.

NEW-JERSEY.

The body of JOHN T. WOLBER, a painter, who has been missing from his home in Newark for some weeks past, was found floating in the Passaic River yesterday morning. He is supposed to have jumped overboard while laboring under a temporary fit of insanity.

CHARLES PHILLIPS, a young man 18 years of age, was arrested in Jersey City last evening at the instance of ELIZABETH WILSON, who accused him with assault and robbery. Miss WILSON had herself been arrested upon the complaint of PHILLIPS early in the day for cowhiding him in the street, and had given bail for her appearance to answer. The story told by the young woman shows that PHILLIPS had betrayed and deserted her, after having lived for several months upon her earnings.

The New-Jersey Railroad and Transportation Company have declared a semi-annual dividend of five per cent.

Mrs. SCHWARTZ, the lady who was so frightfully burned by the explosion of a kerosene lamp at her residence, in Norfolk-street, Newark, died in great agony at 1:30 yesterday morning.

Among the revenue returns for the Newark District, are those of the executors of the estate of E. A. STEVENS at Hoboken. The returns, exclusive of the untaxable property left to his widow, are over $4,000,000. Of this sum $1,000,000 goes to his children, and $100,000 to the Stevens Institute. The total tax amounts to $54,656.

At a late hour on Thursday night a one-legged German, named JACOB SCHWATZER, was stabbed by a colored woman named FRENE JACKSON, in the house No. 207 Newark-avenue, Jersey City. She was admitted to bail to appear for trial.

PRINCE ARTHUR.

Arrival of His Royal Highness—He Takes a Ride in the Park and Visits Wallack's Theatre.

Prince ARTHUR made his advent in our City yesterday, as was expected, by the Hudson River Railroad, arriving at the depot at 12:45 P. M. He was accompanied in his journey from Montreal by Colonel ELPHINSTONE and Lieutenants PICKARD and FITZROY, and met at the depot by Sir EDWARD THORNTON, the British Minister, and Mr. ABBOTT LAWRENCE, the English Consul at this port. The Prince, Sir EDWARD THORNTON and Colonel ELPHINSTONE entered one carriage, and the remainder of the party another, and proceeded to the Brevoort House. A gaping crowd of moderate dimensions collected, both at the depot and at the hotel, in the hope of catching a glimpse, for once in their lives, of a personage who carries his greatness in his veins. Arrived at the hotel, the party was received at the door by the affable and gentlemanly proprietor, Mr. C. C. WAITE, and escorted to their apartments, which consisted of a suite of four rooms fronting on Fifth-avenue. After the important and interesting process of taking a lunch and resting their bones, as such people are presumed to have bones subject to weariness, the party reentered their carriage for a drive in the Park. In the evening they visited Wallack's Theatre, where the tragedy of "Rienzi" was the bill. The Prince occupied the first box in the lower tier on the right of the auditorium, the Prince sitting in front in full view of the audience. At the conclusion of the performance the Prince and his party waited until the greater portion of the audience had left the theatre and then came forth, greeted by a cheer from the crowd assembled in the lobby, and in order to avoid the crowd walked through Thirteenth-street, Fourth-avenue, Twelfth-street and Fifth-avenue to the Brevoort House. A score of curious individuals followed the party, which was escorted by half a dozen policemen, and when the Prince entered his hotel went their ways without hurrahing.

The distinguished party leaves the City this morning to spend a week in Washington, after which he will return and favor the Metropolis with a more extended visit. His movements at this second visit are not yet determined upon, but it is whispered that the several English societies in this City are making preparations to do the handsome thing by the royal representative of Old England.

The Prince bears some resemblance to his eldest brother, as he appeared at the time of his visit to this country ten years ago. He is apparently twenty-two or twenty-three years of age, rather slight, with rosy complexion, and light brown hair and side whiskers. As anything but a Prince, he would by no means pass for a curiosity.

New-Jersey Railroad Matters—New Roads Projected.

Several important railway schemes will come up in the New-Jersey Legislature during the present session. Among others the proposed branch of the Central Railway, from Elizabeth to Newark, will be strongly pushed. The proposed road between Newark and Morristown, which passed the Senate during the session of the last Legislature, but which failed in the House, will be again brought forward. This measure is supported by Senator COON, and a large Morris County interest. Its friends are confident of success. It is said that the Flemington and Delaware Railroad Company will be chartered this Winter. This will give the Flemington Branch Road an outlet to the Delaware, about thirty miles below Easton. The capital stock is $600,000, with the privilege of increasing it to $1,000,000. Collin Cole, John T. Bird, J. C. Cramer, J. Primmer, John Pfanzy, Enoch Alles, David Van Fleet, and others, are the incorporators. Authority will soon be asked to build a through line between Round Brook and Philadelphia, by the purchase of the Belvidere Delaware between Lambertville and Philadelphia, and between Milestone and Trenton; also, a charter of the Hamilton Land Improvement Company, which allows the building of six miles of road. It is now necessary to build six miles between Milestone and Round Brook, which will finish the line. Strictly speaking, the road is 55 miles in length.

It is expected that several other important railway projects will come up for consideration. Altogether it is thought that this will be a very important session relative to railroads.

Arrest of a Noted Bounder—A Remarkable Case of Opinion.

Last evening Detectives TILLEY, of the Central Police, arrested a noted character variously known as BEN Allen alias William H. STEWART alias Charles Carney, and took him to the office of Inspector DILKS, where he was placed out for identification by the proprietors of the following-named houses, viz: Between Yorkville and Philadelphia, and between Milestone and Trenton; also, a character of the Hamilton Land Improvement Company, which allows the building of six miles of road. 105 MILES COMPLETED.

ONLY 12 MILES

TO FINISH THE WHOLE LINE.

SEVEN PER CENT GOLD,

First Mortgage Bonds,

OF THE

Danville, Urbana, Bloomington and Pekin Railroad Company of Illinois.

This road is now VIRTUALLY COMPLETED, as cars run from end to end, and the line will be opened through for business about Feb. 1, as the rails for its completion are now on the ground. Trains are running on the portion completed, and the earnings demonstrate beyond the anticipations of the Company. Specimens of the bonds have already been taken by investors, and the printer now is engaged, will soon absorb the balance.

The road is 117 5-100 miles in length, and is the only East and West line connecting the cities from which it derives its name. We read has over been built by any numerous railroad companies. East and West. As a means of connection with Western Railroads and Canals it is unrivaled with the Toledo, Wabash and Western, at Indianapolis with the Pennsylvania Central, Baltimore and Ohio, and all the main lines East, taking a NEW THROUGH DIRECT ROUTE in Illinois and Indiana from New-York, Boston, Philadelphia and Baltimore to Peoria, Burlington, Quincy, Omaha and the Far West. Among the advantages, therefore, claimed for the road is its POSITION, directly on the line of transcontinental travel, and in the track of the great merchandise of commerce from West to East.

THE LOCAL TRAFFIC must also be very large, as the road passes through one of the richest and most populous counties of Illinois, a State which has been chosen for building up several of the most prosperous railroads in this country, through the immense local traffic contributed to them.

SECURITY OF THE BONDS.

The whole amount of bonds which can be sold is less than $10,000 per mile, on a road which has cost about $50,000 per mile; so that the total liability of the Company for interest from year will be only $10,000 for mile, a sum which is really insignificant when the character and location of the road is considered. In addition to the security afforded by a first mortgage upon the entire property of a first-class railroad 117 miles in length, the bonds have lately been further secured by a consolidation of this line with the Indianapolis, Crawfordville and Danville Road, making over two hundred miles under one management, so that the bonds are not only a First Mortgage of less than $10,000 per mile on the 117 5-100 miles, but have been secured by the Consolidated Company under the name of the Indianapolis, Bloomington and Western Railroad Company.

VALUE AS AN INVESTMENT.

The Bonds pay SEVEN PER CENT. IN GOLD, coupons being paid semi-annually, April 1 and Oct. 1, at the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company in New-York. The Bonds may also be registered at the holder's option.

THEY ARE FREE OF INCOME TAX.

THEY ARE CONVERTIBLE into stock, and as the stocks of several of the principal lines of Illinois, such as the Rock Island, Illinois Central, Chicago and Alton, Burlington and Quincy, have sold at the Stock Boards from above par to nearly 200 per cent, THIS PRIVILEGE OF CONVERTING THE BONDS INTO STOCK OF THE COMPANY AT PAR, GREATLY INCREASES THEIR VALUE, and should be highly appreciated.

INTEREST SEVEN PER CENT. GOLD, PER ANNUM, PAYABLE IN NEW-YORK, MAY AND NOVEMBER.

TWENTY-SEVEN MILES NOW IN OPERATION, LEAVING 118 MILES TO BE COMPLETED.

In offering these securities for sale, we beg to refer investors to the published comprehensive exhibit of the enterprise and its promising future, signed by the President of the Company, General EDWARD F. WINSLOW, and by Brevet Major-General JAMES H. WILSON, United States Army, and of its Directors, and also to the statement appended thereto, signed by W. MILNOR ROBERTS, United States Civil Engineer, and one of the most distinguished railroad constructors of the country. These gentlemen are well known to the country and their friends for their ability, integrity and honor. The accuracy of their statements may therefore be confidently relied upon.

Any one who will carefully study these documents cannot fail to become convinced that this road when completed, will control a large and profitable local business, to say nothing of its through traffic. It will, therefore, be able to pay without fail the interest on its bonds, and render the stock a very profitable investment. Gross earnings at the rate of $9,000 per mile per annum, will be simple to pay the interest on the bond, including the expense of operation and repairs. There is no complete road in the State of Illinois which is not earning much more than this sum per mile. The Company CONFIDENTLY EXPECT THEIR ROAD TO EARN FROM SEVEN TO TEN THOUSAND DOLLARS PER MILE from the time of completion.

This line, throughout its entire length, PASSES OVER THE RICHEST COAL BEDS IN ILLINOIS, now being profitably and extensively worked at various points. In view of the large and increasing consumption of coal at St. Louis and in the adjoining region, the profits upon the transportation of coal alone will, within the limit of three years, more than pay the interest upon the entire bonded debt!

That part of the road already finished has been built, with great economy, rapidity and skill, under the immediate supervision of General WINSLOW, a practical railway constructor of experience, and it is the intention of the Company to complete the road in the shortest practicable time.

These Bonds are issued under a mortgage, made to E. C. Calhoun, President of the Fourth National Bank, New-York, and George Opdyke, Trustee. It is specially drawn and duly recorded in all the counties through which the road passes.

For the present we offer them at the low price of 95, and reserve interest in currency, the Company reserving to itself the right to advance the price whenever it may so determine.

After a thorough investigation of the merits of this enterprise, we confidently recommend these securities to our friends and the public as a safe and profitable investment.
